BERLIN REPORTED TO HAVE SENT RUSSIA AN ULTIMATUM AND TO HAVE STARTED WAR

Germany Announces Great Egyptian-Libyan Victory

Allied Offensive Shattered; Tanks Made in America Claimed Battered

Axis Reports Defeat of British in Four-Day Battle on Border; Many Casualties

BERLIN, June 18.—Germany announced today a "complete victory" over the British forces on the Egyptian-Libyan border, with the four-day-old British attack on Axis positions collapsing in fierce tank battles near the World War intensify.

The anti-tank guns of the Axis forces, the Germans said, shattered this British drive into the desert of northern Cirenaica which was believed aimed at snatching the approach to Egypt from Axis hands and at relieving the beleaguered British garrison at Tobruk, eighty miles farther west.

The British offensive "has been frustrated with extremely heavy British losses, especially in tanks," the high command said in its daily communiqué, and a German-Italian counter attack has "ended with complete victory" and with the British "overwhelmed and retreating."

British Announce Withdrawal
The British Middle East command at Cairo acknowledged that the British advance forces had withdrawn to positions on the Libyan front, but said that they "had accomplished our objects" of forcing the enemy "to disclose his strength." The British said they inflicted "heavy casualties," captured several hundred prisoners and destroyed "large numbers of Axis tanks and guns."

A Reuters, British news agency, dispatch from Cairo tonight said armored giants still were waging fierce battle east of Halfaya (Hellfire) Pass.

American Tanks in Action
At Rome the Italians concurred in the German accounts, adding that "hundreds" of American M-2 tanks had been used by the British. This is a new light tank which Washington circles believed was receiving its baptism of fire in Africa, since several hundred have been sent to British forces. It is of thirteen tons, armed with a 37-mm cannon and several machine guns and having steel sides of special strength.

The Germans declared that both sides threw powerful forces into the fighting, and the resulting battle was regarded here as the greatest yet fought in Africa.

British Tanks Destroyed
The Germans said that an important part of British tank power had been destroyed, and the Axis forces were declared to be still holding all their positions. The British attack centered on Salum, which lies on the Egyptian side of the Libyan border. It was the third battle for this post in ten months.

Dienst Aus Deutschland, authoritative commentary service, said that the British threw so many tanks into the attack that some of the battles which developed approached the dimensions of tank battles of the World War.

Allied Troops Attack Damascus At Expiration of an Ultimatum

LONDON, Thursday, June 19 (AP)—The British news agency Reuters reported today from Palestine that Allied troops now are attacking Damascus.

A military spokesman in Jerusalem made the announcement. Allied troops had been reported steadily surrounding the Syrian capital amid fierce fighting.

SORROW TURNS TO JOY

The wife and two children of Capt. E. W. Myers, master of the torpedoed American freighter, Robin Moor, beam with joy at news he is safe. Capt. Myers was among the 35 survivors of the freighter, all hitherto unaccounted for, who were picked up at sea and landed at Capetown, Union of South Africa.

Germany Admits Nazi Bomb Fell In Dublin Area

Statement Expresses Regret and Promises Compensation for Act

LONDON, Thursday, June 19 (AP)—An Exchange Telegraph, British news agency, dispatch from Dublin today said the Irish information bureau had issued a statement saying Germany admitted responsibility of a German plane for the bombing of the capital of Eire on the night of May 31.

The Eire government's announcement said it had been informed by the Germans as follows:

"The thorough investigations made by competent German authorities concerning the dropping of bombs on Dublin May 31 now establishes the responsibility of German aircraft."

"It has been ascertained a German aircraft flew over the east Irish coast by mistake in the early morning of May 31. The aircraft changed its course as soon as it recognized it was over Irish territory but in any case it did not drop any bombs."

"Since, however, the Irish government have stated their investigations have shown that bombs dropped on Dublin were of German origin and as a very strong wind was prevailing at high altitudes on the night in question it may have driven aircraft over the east Irish coast without the knowledge of the pilot, the possibility of such a plane having dropped the bombs cannot be excluded."

"In the circumstances, the German government unhesitatingly express its sincere regrets to the Irish government. Furthermore, the German government in view of the friendly relations existing between the two countries are prepared to give compensation for the deplorable loss of life and injury to personal property."

Twenty-seven lives were lost and 45 persons were wounded in the bombing, for which the German government had previously disclaimed responsibility.

Ankara Pact Not All Nazis Sought, London Declares

New Friendship Agreement Not Alarming, British Declare

LONDON, June 18 (AP)—British informed circles tonight viewed the new German-Turkish friendship pact as a move by Berlin to increase Russian fears of encirclement and said Germany accepted much less than she had hoped to gain by the treaty with Britain's non-belligerent ally.

The general view here was that the torpedoed American freighter, Robin Moor, beam with joy at news he is safe. Capt. Myers was among the 35 survivors of the freighter, all hitherto unaccounted for, who were picked up at sea and landed at Capetown, Union of South Africa.

An informed source said Turkey's "complete frankness" and her insistence on preserving her treaty obligations with Great Britain had in a large measure "softened what otherwise might have been regarded as a diplomatic blow."

London Not Surprised
Turkey had shown frankness in informing this country of the negotiations and impending signature, it was said, and the announcement caused no surprise in London.

It was said that while the pact contained "possible future dangers" Britain had reason to be grateful that Turkey "by remaining firm on essentials has concluded an agreement infinitely less dangerous than the Germans desire."

The Germans had previously insisted Turkey should abandon her friendship with Britain and grant Germany extensive economic and military concessions, informed sources added.

By signing the "stop-gap" pact Turkey "undoubtedly hoped to prolong her non-involvement in the war and that hope is fully appreciated in London," it was said.

Turks on Difficult Spot
The defection of France helped put Turkey in a difficult position, particularly in view of her shortage of military equipment. Britain's own requirements have been such that she has been unable to correct the deficiency.

This latest development in the apparent crisis in Russian-German relations coincided with a dispatch direct from Moscow reporting that the entire Soviet community was being kept in a state of constant mobilized preparedness, and with terse, highly-censored dispatches from Helsinki telling of unusual military activities, including Russia, in Finland.

Foreign sources here had predicted the signing of a German-Turkish agreement probably providing for mutual respect for the inviolability and integrity of national territory, with the Germans expecting thereby to "leave Russia with a feeling of still greater isolation and encirclement and consequently to lessen her will to resist German demands."

Britain Kept Informed
These sources reported that Britain had been kept informed of the negotiations throughout, and that "there appears to be nothing in the proposed agreement which would open the way for passage of German troops across Turkish territory."

The German-Turkish agreement is expected to provide for consultation on matters of mutual interest. Thus, according to informed opinion, Germany is intent primarily for the time being on trying to encircle Russia and force Stalin's capitulation to far-reaching demands, economic and possibly military.

July 5 Declared Maryland Holiday

The governor said approval of such a declaration had been given by bankers and retail merchants.

German Attitude Toward U. S. Is One of Caution

Berlin Avoids Act Which Might Further Endanger Relations

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF
BERLIN, June 18 (AP)—Berlin in recent hours has carefully avoided any hasty act which would cause further deterioration of German-American relations.

As always is the case before final decisions are made in important matters official quarters were wholly silent, and that silence seemed to cover a disposition to go slowly.

At the same time it was indicated that in the actions closing German consulates in the United States, the freezing of German assets and the requirement that German nationals get special permits before leaving the United States, the Reich would insist on preserving dignity.

Vigorous Nazi Protest
Nothing authoritative respecting German-American relations had been said tonight since it was announced that President Roosevelt's order closing the consulates had been vigorously protested.

The German attitude still seemed to be that the next move was up to the United States. Even the German press, which usually is violently articulate when someone touches the national dignity, was restrained.

The matter, however, will not end (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

Turkey Signs 10-Year Pact with Germany To Stay Out of the War

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

BERLIN, June 18 (AP)—Germany gained the signature of Britain's non-fighting ally, Turkey, to a ten-year friendship pact tonight, thereby assuring herself that the Turks will stay out of the Reich's battle with the British.

Conn Punishes Joe Louis For 12 Rounds only To Lose in the Thirteenth

(Round by round story on page 16)

By SID FEDER
POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, June 18 (AP)—Joe Louis held onto his world heavyweight championship tonight—but he never came closer to losing it.

For twelve full rounds, Billy Conn, the "fresh kid" from Pittsburgh who wasn't supposed to have a "prayer," the good little man who was laughed at as a challenger gave the Brown Bomber more than he sent. Then Joe found the range and with a fearful bombardment that lasted less than a minute and a half, he chopped Conn down in the thirteenth.

The curly-haired Irish kid was literally beaten to the floor, and, helpless, remained there as Referee Eddie Josephs counted him out. He made an effort to get up at "ten," but he couldn't make it.

Thus, Louis stretched his all-time record run as "king of the ring" to eighteen straight defenses, but, as the fight ended, a roaring crowd that jammed this big National League ball park wondered if two seconds might not have meant the difference between the old boss or a cry for "the king is dead, long live the king."

Coal Controversy Handed Back to Mediation Board

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP)—The southern soft coal wage contract negotiations landed quietly back in the National Defense Mediation Board's lap today but there was no indication that another mine shutdown might result.

The southern coal producers, it was learned, asked the board to interpret its recommendations of two weeks ago for settlement of the coal wage dispute.

The southerners and the CIO United Mine Workers were reliably reported to have made no progress in recent negotiations. The stumbling block, it was learned, has been disagreement as to the intent and meaning of some phases of the board's recommendations.

It was understood that the producers and the UMW were at odds over such questions as vacations with pay, the elimination of the reject clause in southern contracts and related matters.

The 40-cent differential between north and south wages is no longer an issue since the board recommended that it be eliminated and the producers accepted the proposal.

Blunt Rejection To Nazi Protest Appears Likely

U. S. Moves To Prevent Consuls from Moving to Latin America

WASHINGTON, June 18 (AP)—A blunt rejection was in store today for Germany's strong protest on the expulsion of Nazi consuls from the United States and the government was taking steps to prevent them from filtering into Latin American countries to continue "intimidation" activities.

Making one of his rare visits to the state department to deliver the note, Hans Thomsen, German chargé d'affaires, was told that it would be given consideration.

But a little later Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, announced that arrangements were proceeding for the departure of the consular officials whom President Roosevelt accused of subversive activities. This left no doubt as to the nature of the American reply to Germany.

Will Send Germans Home
Welles added that under present conditions the usual procedure was to request other belligerent governments for safe conduct of the ousted officials and to make suitable arrangements for their return home.

The undersecretary made this statement in response to a question as to whether any action had been taken to prevent the consuls from going to Latin American countries. His reply indicated that the arrangements would insure the return of the officials direct to Germany, thus blocking their entry into other American nations.

Two Routes Open
Two homeward routes were open to the consuls—via Lisbon, Portugal or Japan. The United States officially notified other American governments of the expulsion order against the consuls, thereby raising the question of applying a pan-American (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

Alarming Rumors Spread in Turkey Not Confirmed by Official Sources

Germans Believed in Some Capitals To Be Exerting Powerful Pressure on Silent Kremlin

(By The Associated Press)
From Turkey—which perhaps significantly had only a few hours before signed a "friendship" treaty with the Nazis—there came unconfirmed reports early today (Thursday) that German had served an ultimatum upon Russia and even that Nazi troops had attacked the Soviet from fifteen border points.

All this was roundabout and in London and elsewhere was heard with strong skepticism.

Use Turkey for Base
The Germans were in any event using Turkey as a base, voluntary or involuntary, for beating at the silent Kremlin with a powerful pressure exceeding in intensity anything yet loosed in Berlin.

Whether Germany had in fact invaded the Soviet with armed men, she certainly had done so with the long specters of uncertainty and fear.

Stories that Hitler had taken direct action were circulated in this manner. The report of an ultimatum was relayed about the world by the British news agency Reuters, which attributed it to a representative in Ankara of the National Broadcasting Company. This representative, Martin Armstrong, was represented as saying he got it from "most reliable diplomatic sources" and more-over that the ultimatum was in fact about to expire.

Actual Attack Rumored
The rumor of an actual Nazi attack likewise was circulated by Reuters, and it was attributed to a Columbia Broadcasting System representative, Winston Durdett, who made it clear, however, that what he had picked up were unconfirmed reports heard in various commercial radios in Ankara. He made it plain he did not vouch for them.

What Hitler was understood to be demanding—and this was generally accepted—was such control over the Russian wheat fields of the Ukraine and the oil fields of the Caucasus as to make Stalin's government little more internationally than another Rumania or Bulgaria.

The world-wide speculation that fighting had begun was put in considerable doubt by the fact that in London there had been such rumors for seventeen hours and no confirmation had come.

The Germans, by recent official admission of the Russians themselves, have been marching into Reich-dominated areas bordering the Soviet—Poland and Rumania.

Threaten "Blitzkrieg"
This was a known fact. Another was that Germans in Ankara, the Turkish capital, have been going about threatening a "blitzkrieg" against the Soviet Union, saying: "All signs point to war."

"That Germany would attack Russia—as these Nazis said—seemed easily possible. That it would be a 'blitzkrieg'—a lightning war more suited to far smaller areas—seemed far less possible. That it was part of a Nazi fear campaign seemed beyond question."

Curtailment of Car Production Is Being Studied

Manufacturers and Retailers Considering Serious Problem

By DAVID J. WILKIE
Associated Press Automotive Editor

DETROIT, June 18—How far curtailment of new car production in the 1942 model year will affect automobile use during that period is being studied by manufacturers and retailers, who are daily coming to believe more generally that production next year will be geared more closely than ever to actual requirements.

So far as restriction on use is concerned, the manufacturers and retailers alike assert that such action automatically would cut off a source of large and important revenue to governmental units throughout the land.

26,000,000 Cars Licensed

There are at present something like 26,000,000 passenger cars licensed for operation in the United States; about two-thirds of that number are vehicles not more than five years old, five million will be less than a year old when the new model period begins on August 1.

One fact that has received relatively little notice in connection with rumors of further curtailment in car output is that nobody knows how much contraction in retail demand will develop next year following the tremendous bulge of the 1941 model period.

Many trade observers believe that even had there been no production curtailment, edict from the Office of Production Management, an automatic tapering off in car output in 1942 was to be expected.

It will be paid for out of next year's doesn't allow for probable increased individual incomes during the next year, the trade experts reply that most of this year's car purchases will follow the present emergency earnings.

"A Real Selling Job"

One leading sales manager said recently that if the industry made only 3,200,000 cars during the coming model year the merchandising division would have "a real selling job" on its hands.

Thus it seems safe to say that some curtailment in new car production next year will not be wholly unwelcome to the industry.

Motor vehicle manufacturers long have maintained their business as a vital factor in the restoration of industrial and commercial equilibrium following the first World war; they are convinced it will have an equally important part in what will follow the present emergency.

Gradually disappearing among the car manufacturers is apprehension over the extent of a probable further curtailment in output. They expect the already ordered 70.15 percent cut to be increased to perhaps as much as 50 percent of this year's volume. They do not expect, however, that a complete suspension of production will be ordered.

Turkey Signs

bor causing trouble then, so von Papen secured the pact which now permits the German army to pursue operations in the middle east without worry of Turkish interference.

Authorized sources said they did not know, however, whether Russia had been told in advance of the new friendship between Germany and Turkey.

(Informed foreign quarters in London, who apparently received a strong hint of the pact before it was announced, interpreted the diplomatic coup as a move to isolate Russia at a time when German-Soviet relations are growing strained.)

Although the pact frees the German army of fear of trouble from Turkey in event of a push in the middle east, authorized sources said it has no bearing on the warfare in Syria.

Situation in Syria

The French are taking care of the British there to the satisfaction of Germany, authorized commentators said.

The treaty also says that nothing in it impairs the obligations which either party previously has contracted.

(Turkey's mutual assistance treaty binds Britain to go to Turkey's aid if she is invaded. It also binds Turkey to help Britain in event of war in the Mediterranean, but so far it has not been implemented by the Turks. In a second treaty recently reaffirmed between Turkey and Russia, the Turks agreed not to attack Russia in event the latter is invaded.)

Plan Economic Cooperation

Besides agreeing to conduct their press and radio in accordance with the principles of mutual friendship and to iron out all their differences in friendly negotiation, the Turks and the Germans decided upon close economic cooperation.

The two countries will enter into economic negotiations "utilizing the mutual experiences gained by the two countries during war," the announcement said.

The phrase referring to war experiences caught the eye of foreign observers, who were told by authorized commentators that "we do not want to be weighed down by ancient economic theories, nor with obsolete forms of economic dealing."

"Economy as developed in the present war has opened up new possibilities. Our mutual economic re-

Five Persons Escape Injury in Collision On Frostburg Street

Five persons, including a Cumberland salesman, escaped injury yesterday morning when two automobiles collided on East Main street, Frostburg.

The drivers were Marvin V. Schlosnagle, 25, of Accident, Md., and Valentine J. Lydinger, 707 Maryland avenue, a Swift and Company salesman.

Schlosnagle was accompanied by his parents and a sister, Miss Mabel Schlosnagle, who was being brought here to Memorial hospital to be admitted. A passing motorist took her to the hospital after the accident.

State Trooper William E. Hopkins investigated.

and that almost cost me the fight." Crediting Conn with a great fight, Louis said Billy did a fine job of keeping his head. He really expected him to start slugging after getting clipped early in the fight.

Louis also revealed that Conn told him in the ninth round: "Joe, you're in for a tough fight tonight."

Conn, joyous over the fact that he not only stood up for nearly thirteen rounds but that he hurt the bomber in the twelfth with one of the many left hooks he landed, said he didn't know whether he was ahead.

"I didn't care," said Conn. "All I wanted to do was fight. I did that, didn't I? And I hurt him."

Naturally, Billy said he wanted another fight and across the way, Louis said he was willing to give it to him. Promoter Mike Jacobs, after kissing the challenger on each cheek, whispered something in Billy's ear. That apparently concerned a return bout.

Asked if he had heard the count in the thirteenth round, Conn replied: "Sure I did. I got up, didn't I?"

lations are to be placed on the broadest possible basis."

Press To Be Friendly

The understanding that both sides will be nice to each other in all avenues of their publicity, put an end to something which has irritated German authorities considerably in the recent past—the unfriendliness of a section of the Turkish press and radio.

In fact the renewed friendship between these two allies of the World war was a feature considerably stressed by authorized sources who said the pact proved Britain was unable to break the bonds.

The treaty signed at 9 p. m. (2 p. m. EST) in Ankara by Germany's ace diplomat, Ambassador Franz von Papen, and the Turkish foreign minister, Sukru Saracoglu, was hailed by spokesmen here as clinching three points:

Three Main Points

1. Germany and Turkey can arrange and carry out mutually advantageous economic deals.
2. Turkey is convinced that no interest of Germany's is counter to Turkish interests.
3. Turkey can depend upon it that "Germany never forgets her friends."

Elaborating on the theme of friendship, the spokesman declared Germany and Turkey had been close in spirit since the days of Frederick the Great and that this spirit had prevailed down to the present despite occasional "minor misunderstandings."

He lauded the late Kemal Ataturk, president of Turkey, for bringing the two countries closer together economically until the Reich is again Turkey's greatest exporter and importer.

It was not known here whether any negotiations are under way to conclude a similar pact between Turkey and Germany's Axis partner, Italy, but a spokesman said Premier Mussolini had emphasized that he too wants an understanding with the Turks.

The treaty, with its three clauses and its preamble, is to be ratified in Berlin as soon as possible.

Conn Punishes

of the thirteenth after the most rousing heavyweight title fight since Tony Galento and the Bomber put on their old-fashioned slugfest two years ago. And, had he been able to make those two seconds to the fourteenth, he might have stayed out of harm's way for two more rounds, to win on a decision. For the twelve completed rounds, he was master. On the Associated Press's score card he led eight rounds to four at that point, making it an absolute "must" for Joe to put the crusher on to keep his crown.

But win or lose for Conn, brother, this was a scrap. Joe started out just as he had indicated in his training camp. He had Billy boy hanging on by the end of the second. Then something happened.

Mostly, it was Billy's "Irish" coming out. Through the third and fourth he started to tag Joe, with no more concern for the destroyer's dynamite than if Louis's hands were feather dusters.

Starting with the sixth and going right on through the twelfth, with the possible exception of the tenth, when Joe opened up, Billy banged away at the head man as though he held a lease on him. He waded in, particularly in the eighth and ninth, and Joe must have got the idea there was a whole machine gun company in the ring with him.

Staggered Joe in Twelfth

Two swinging left hooks right on the whiskers in the twelfth round staggered Joe, and for a few moments the crowd, which packed the upper and lower grandstands and filled every one of the 14,000 in-field seats, went absolutely wild. The fans jumped on chairs, tossed hats or anything else handy and let out a roar like the sound of the Times Square subway station at rush hour as Joe fell back into the ropes and came out covering up and trying to hold on.

But came the thirteenth, and with the unlucky number all the black cats in the world must have trotted out in front of Billy. He was grinning now, and as confident as if he were taking on a five-year-old. Then the Bomber, who had done so little punching through the middle rounds that the fans were wondering if he had the wrong idea about what this business was all about, came to like a sleepwalker waking up under a lamp-post with his pajamas on.

Down Goes Billy

He caught Billy near a neutral corner with a sharp left and a right cross that brought Conn erect. The "glamor boy" tried to fight back, and for a moment held Louis off. But the No. 1 boy smelled the kill now. He waded in and fired half a dozen rights, each of which might have busted a plank in two. Billy took 'em, but he was badly hurt. Then Joe stood him off with a long left spear, near the Louis corner, and whistled a right hand that had haymaker written all over it.

Conn went down and was motionless until the count reached eight. Then he rose to a sitting position, and tried to pull himself up, but it was no go.

They May Fight Again

"I don't remember any particular wallop in that thirteenth," Billy said later in his dressing room. "All I know is there was a helluva lot of 'em. I wanna meet that guy again."

Promoter Mike Jacobs rushed into his quarters just then, kissed Billy on both cheeks, and promised him just that, with a "you'll get it Billy, don't worry."

On the whole, Billy proved one thing more than a little bit, Joe has gone back so you really can notice it now. In the middle rounds, when the little 174-pounder who gave up the light-heavyweight

Conn's Mother, Ill, Proud of Her Son

PITTSBURGH, June 18 (P)—"I am very proud of him," whispered the critically ill mother of Billy Conn tonight, when news of her boy's defeat by Joe Louis was taken to her by a sister, Mrs. Rose Shook.

The mother, near death from a lingering disease, smiled weakly and turned to the wall after being told only that "Billy lost," Mrs. Shook said.

Mary Jane Conn, 20, "Sis" to Billy and boss of the household, collapsed beside a radio as her brother was being counted out. Peggy Ann, 11-year old red-haired sister of the boxer kept a stiff upper lip.

"Aw, he'll get another match and he'll beat that Joe Louis I'll bet you," said the youngster.

Mrs. Conn was too ill to listen to the broadcast.

Strikers Are Fined

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., June 18. (P)—Fines of $50 and costs and suspended nine-month jail sentences were imposed today on three Interwoven Stocking Company strikers who entered pleas of guilty to a misdemeanor charge of conspiring to do bodily harm. They withdrew pleas of innocence to a felony.

Circuit Judge Decatur H. Rodgers ordered others of the more than 50 indicted as a result of violence during the recent Interwoven strike, to appear June 24. Those sentenced today were Mildred and Jennings Smallwood and Martha Baker.

championship for this shot just walked in and tossed punches at the 199½-pound Louis until he covered up, it didn't resemble the old Brown Bomber anymore than it did your aunt Gladys.

Yet while he has slowed up and while he doesn't get his punches off nearly as sharply anymore, Joe proved he still can do a lot of things which aren't nice to anyone he nails on the "potato."

Joe knew better than anyone how close he came to blowing the title. In his packed dressing room he explained he realized he was "far behind and had to knock the boy out." "nuther thirteen-inning game." "Yep," he went on, "it was 'nuther thirteen-inning game. At that I didn't know I had him till I actually knocked him out. He knows how to take care of himself in the ring better'n anyone I ever fought. Then, when he started punchin' me around, I figured he's start to gamble. And he did. In the thirteenth, he threw a right and a left hook, that way, so I straightened him up with my hook and caught him with the right."

His handlers revealed the champion hurt his left hand in the seventh round, "when Joe pushed Billy against the ropes."

The greatest crowd to see a fight since 72,000 turned out for the second Louis-Schmelling tussle three years ago, was on its feet and howling at the finish. A total of 54,487 cash customers contributed to an approximate gross gate of $450,000.

Artificial Insemination Is Used To Produce 9,500 Babies in U. S.

CHICAGO, June 18 (P)—A survey disclosed today that artificial insemination, instead of being uncommon, has been used to produce almost 9,500 babies in the United States.

The husbands were used in almost two thirds of the artificial inseminations, resulting in 3,569 boys and 2,271 girls. Donors were used successfully in 3,649 pregnancies, of which 2,107 were boys and 1,542 girls.

Disclosure that this method is used much more than was commonly believed was made in the journal of the American Medical Association by Dr. Francis I. Seymour and Dr. Alfred Koerner, both of New York.

They announced the results of 30,000 questionnaires to which 7,642 physicians replied, a survey sponsored by the national research foundation for Eugenic Alleviation of Sterility, Inc.

More than ninety-seven per cent of the pregnancies following arti-

China Becoming Stronger Tsui Says in Speech

First Secretary of Chinese Embassy Speaks at College Park

COLLEGE PARK, Md., June 18 (P)—China is getting "stronger and stronger, and is ready to continue resistance four years or forty years more, if necessary," T. L. Tsui, first secretary of the Chinese embassy, declared today in an address to the rural women's short course of the University of Maryland extension service.

Tsui said that China's territory is so large that the Chinese cannot "afford" to buy time with space.

"Japan admits," he asserted, "that China is stronger, and while losses on both sides have been great, Japan is feeling it more."

He declared that Japan is experiencing a shortage of manpower in her industries.

"The Japanese are fighting," he said, "with a guilty conscience—if they have any. China has the advantage that theirs is a defensive fight, while Japan is fighting a war of aggression."

While saying that the Chinese are noted for their individualism, Tsui declared theirs was a long history "of a united people against an outside foe." He expressed appreciation of the help this country is giving, and declared that China is in the first line of defense for democracy.

At an election held by the Maryland state council of homemakers Queens town was named president for another year. Mrs. Norman McCordell of Williamsport was elected vice-president, and Mrs. A. S. David of Easton, secretary.

resolution enjoining all the countries to prevent activities of foreign diplomatic or consular agents which "endanger the peace and the democratic tradition of America."

Protest Not Made Public

The German protest was not made public but it was understood to reject firmly the allegations contained in the American note and to protest the action of the United States as a violation of the American-German treaty of friendship and consular rights of 1923.

The American reply was expected to reiterate the charges that the consuls engaged in activities "wholly outside the scope of their legitimate duties" and to contend in turn that they had violated the consular treaty.

The consulates, along with three Nazi agencies—the German library of information in New York, the German railway and tourist agencies and the Trans-Ocean News Service—were ordered closed and all German nationals connected with them removed from "American territory" by July 10. Trans-Ocean has no connection with any American news service.

Ankara Pact Not

Probably in connection with the expected treaty, German Ambassador Franz von Papen was reported to have had an hour's talk with Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu at Ankara yesterday.

Russia and Turkey Friendly

Turkey, guardian of the strategic Dardanelles leading into the Black Sea, is in a keystone position in the war. Russia, long friendly with Turkey on the policy that cooperation best served their mutual interests in the Black Sea, only last March 25 gave Ankara a pledge of benevolent and helpful neutrality in case the Turks are attacked by Germany.

Russia's position thus obviously would be affected by a German-Turkish treaty, and this may be one of the factors underlying the persistent reports, from many European capitals, of Russian-German tension as well as unusual activities reported direct from Moscow.

Today a Moscow dispatch stated that although there are no signs of a general or partial mobilization, "no effort is being spared" to keep the entire Soviet community in a state of mobilized preparedness.

Two Countries Friendly

Although specifying that Turkey's "existing obligations" (with Britain) were not affected, he declared roundly that the treaty had placed German-Turkish friendship "on the most solid basis and confirmed for the future that the two countries will not oppose one another in any way."

The Germans, saying they didn't know whether the Soviet had been told and intimating that they didn't much care, declared the pact showed that Britain couldn't keep Turkey and the Reich apart as friends, that the two countries would carry out mutually beneficial economic deals, that Germany had no interest in conflict with Turkey's interests, and finally that the Turks "can depend upon it — Germany never forgets her friends."

But, having taken these sharp pokes at the British, Berlin then softened them by adding that nothing in the new treaty would weaken the existing obligations of either Turkey or Germany to third parties.

Moscow dispatches sent before the signing of the treaty was announced stated that a vast campaign to keep everybody ready for any emergency already was under way, but the Kremlin itself was characteristically silent.

Finland, fearful of being caught in the middle in a possible Russian-German war, called up military reservists.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

A savage three-day battle in Northern Africa appears to have ended in the repulse of British forces, with possibly grave consequences for the Allied cause there.

The encounter leaves no doubt that heavy German-Italian forces are massed in eastern Libya, close up to the Egyptian border, probably preparing for a powerful new thrust at Alexandria and the Suez Canal. It also greatly increases the peril of the besieged British garrison at Tobruk, last British foothold in Axis reconquered Libya.

Hoped to Free Tobruk

Berlin and Rome accounts say that relief of Tobruk was the real British objective in launching the now-collapsed drive. Cairo advisers relatedly describe it as a reconnaissance in force to rest out enemy strength on the Libyan front.

Both motives could have prompted the British high command in the east to plan the operation. Failure to crack the close Axis net drawn for weeks about the Tobruk garrison might lead to another Dunkerque for the British on a limited scale. Sea evacuation of Tobruk probably is possible; but not without heavy casualties to troops and ships and the surrender of a rear guard.

Major British Effort

Accurate information as to the extent to which Axis divisions in Libya were reinforced during and since the battle of Crete is essential to the Cairo commander and would justify risks. However, eyewitness accounts from the British front clearly indicate that that was not the only purpose of the drive. These accounts bear out Axis reports of a major British effort into which were thrown powerful tank and mechanized forces, now beaten back.

Retention in British hands of the Tobruk outpost even after it had been by-passed by German-Italian mechanized forces indicates its importance to the Cairo command. It now appears certain that the British drive was primarily aimed at advancing the western defense of Egypt at least to the Tobruk area and that it has failed.

of the night's grave obscurities. Wednesday she signed a treaty with the Nazis which left the Soviet alone nad isolated and also appeared to have rawn the Turks away from their British allies to a considerable extent.

The Turkish foreign minister, Sukru Saracoglu, broadcast an explanation that could have given little pleasure to the English.

Although specifying that Turkey's "existing obligations" (with Britain) were not affected, he declared roundly that the treaty had placed German-Turkish friendship "on the most solid basis and confirmed for the future that the two countries will not oppose one another in any way."

The Germans, saying they didn't know whether the Soviet had been told and intimating that they didn't much care, declared the pact showed that Britain couldn't keep Turkey and the Reich apart as friends, that the two countries would carry out mutually beneficial economic deals, that Germany had no interest in conflict with Turkey's interests, and finally that the Turks "can depend upon it — Germany never forgets her friends."

Navy Opens Drive For Men as Fleet Continues Growth

"Stand-by" Orders Sent Reservists Not Yet Called into Service

WASHINGTON, June 18 (P)—The navy, which receives no men from the draft, began an intensive drive for recruits to man the growing fleet today and issued "stand-by" orders to all reservists not hitherto called into active service.

Meanwhile Secretary of the Navy Knox, asserting that "we are going to live in a disturbed world for a long time," urged House committee approval of the St. Lawrence seaway and electric power project. The seaway would open the Great Lakes to ocean-going commerce, and Knox stressed the desirability of building ships along the lakes where they would be "reasonably secure from attack."

The Senate Military committee, at the same time, heard Senator Downey (D-Cal.) describe the proposed "property seizure" bill as one which "would create a military dictatorship under which tens of thousands of small businesses would be ruined."

At the navy department, it was said that 6,546 reserve officers and 14,313 reserve enlisted men had not yet been called to duty. Last week Secretary Knox ruled that merchant marine reserve officers could be called up for service without their consent.

The goal of the recruiting campaign is 12,000 to 15,000 men each month, instead of the present figure of 8,000. Captain Abel T. Bidwell, assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation, expressed confidence that "we can get all the men we want" without drawing upon the selective service lists.

The present strength of the navy is 264,798 officers and men and the need for increasing that figure grows more pressing as new warships are commissioned, the crews of older vessels increased, and auxiliary vessels added to the fleet.

McKeesport Mayor Raps Communists

Blames Them for Strike of 179 Service Employees

McKEESPORT, Pa., June 18 (P)—Mayor George H. Lysle charged today that the city's 179 striking service employees were "being used as a smoke screen to cover Communist activities" as the city's health officer warned of danger from accumulating garbage and trash.

Lysle said the striking garbage collectors, street cleaners and maintenance men in this city of 57,000 were "playing into the hands of the Reds" declaring his belief that "our progress in national defense x x x is so well set up and prepared that it has interfered with the plans of the Communist party," the 74-year old executive said.

"While I am fully convinced that none of the employees of the city are in any way identified with the Communist party, nor do I believe that any of the local CIO committee are in any way identified with the Communist party, from what I know I am firmly convinced that they are being used as a smoke screen for Communist activities."

The mayor has refused to meet members of a strikers committee as union representatives but only as city employees. The union seeks wage increases and union recognition. Councilman Ben Rosenberg met tonight with union men in an effort to get the men back to work.

Negro Is Jailed on Disorderly Conduct Count; Another Fined

One negro was committed to jail and another was fined yesterday in police court on disorderly conduct charges which grew out of an altercation early Tuesday night in a North Mechanic street cafe for negroes.

Eugene Green, of Ridgeley, W. Va., was sentenced to serve ten days in the city jail in default of a $10 fine, while Buster Jackson, 10 Thomas street, paid $15 fine.

Police were called to the place after Jackson reportedly broke the handle of a shotgun over Green's head. Both fled but were arrested later.

Martinsburg Man Fined

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 18 (P)—L. A. Rickman of Martinsburg was fined $125 and costs in Harb County Circuit Court after he entered a plea of Nolo Contendere in an indictment charging him with selling securities without registering as a dealer, the state securities division said today.

Judgment was preferred by Judge Harlan Calhoun in the case of Paul B. Wolfkill of Piedmont, who pleaded similarly on the same charge.

Charter Is Received

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 18 (P)—The Gay Mining Company of Mount Gay, Logan county, a $100,000 concern, received a charter today from the secretary of state. The company, which will have its chief works in Stafford district of Mineral county, was incorporated by Harry S. Gay and Vera Davis Gay of Mount Gay and P. Paul Chambers of Logan.

Fireworks Reform Makes Headway

THE MANY MARYLANDERS who have supported the fireworks control law enacted at the last session of the General Assembly and who naturally are hoping that its enforcement will not be delayed, will be interested and gratified to learn that the movement represented by this legislation made progress this year in other states.

The enactment of such laws by five states this year will assure a more "safe and sane" Fourth of July next month in eleven states, representing about forty per cent of the nation's population, provided the law sticks in this state, according to a report just issued by the Council of State governments. Aside from Maryland, the law of only one of these states will apply to this Independence day celebration, this being Arizona. Laws passed by the legislatures of Minnesota, Ohio and Florida will not become effective until after the holiday.

The other nine states with strict fireworks control laws are New York (law effective this year after enactment in 1940), Delaware, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Utah and West Virginia. All these laws were based on a model drafted by the National Fire Protection Association in 1938 after a study of the Iowa, Michigan and New Jersey statutes, considered at that time the only adequate laws.

The fireworks control laws in general provide for properly supervised public displays, operated under a permit and requiring a bond to cover possible injury to persons and property. Sale of fireworks for private use, or for other than supervised display purposes, is practically prohibited.

Effectiveness of adequate legislation and, especially, enforcement, is shown by a recent survey by the American Medical Association of Fourth of July injuries and deaths. Adoption of the strict fireworks control laws resulted in a sharp drop in the number of injuries from the total reported for the year preceding enactment of the laws.

Indiana, for example, reported 198 injuries from fireworks in 1939—before the control law went into effect. In 1940, under the new law, only two serious fireworks injuries were reported. Pennsylvania reported 1,700 injuries in 1938, before the state's fireworks control law was in effect. In 1939, however, the number was cut to eighty-five under the new law, and to fifty-eight in 1940.

As for deaths from fireworks, there has been a steady decline in the number with only eight reported in 1940 due directly to the celebration of the Fourth of July. All but two of the fatalities occurred in states lacking adequate fireworks control legislation. For 1939, 1938 and 1937, death figures were thirteen, eighteen and twenty respectively.

Actual statistical evidence is thus seen as a powerful argument for continued support of the reform, which ultimately will come throughout the country, but the sooner it does the better.

Some Robin Moor Questions That Require Sane Answers

TENSION over the torpedoing of the American freighter, Robin Moor, in the South Atlantic was measurably lessened when the happy news came that all the missing survivors who had been rescued in their lifeboats had been landed at Capetown. Controversy will continue, however, as to the excuses that may be offered and the blame attached for the destruction of the vessel and the manner of its sinking.

Some questions must be clearly, calmly and satisfactorily answered. One is whether the German government here made the first hostile move so far as German-American relations are concerned in light of the steps already taken by this country to aid an enemy of Germany. Another is whether the vessel actually carried cargo material in whole or in part that was classified as contraband by Germany and Britain. If so, and it was headed for a port under control of Britain, could it be said that it was engaged in "peaceful commerce"?

One thing that cannot be ignored is the cold fact that this country has been aiding an enemy of Germany, doing everything it can short of actual overt aggression to bring about German defeat. In doing that we have had to incur risks and we shall probably have to incur more of them. Wherefore, was the sinking of the Robin Moor just one of those risks we have assumed, or a coldblooded piece of war savagery for which there could be no reasonable excuse and for which there could be but one answer?

Free Press Has Right and Duty

THE GUARANTY of freedom of the press was written into colonial constitutions and into the Bill of Rights amendments to the United States Constitution as a declaration of right won after a long struggle between government and people. The struggle did not end, however, with the inclusion of the guaranty in the constitution. It has gone on with little abatement.

The latest of these clashes of press and officials developed last year in Missouri. A judge dismissed an extortion charge against a state representative. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch denounced the ruling as unsupported by the evidence and dictated by partisan considerations. The judge held that the comment was in contempt of court, fined the corporation that owns the newspaper $2,000, fined the writer of the editorial $200 and sentenced him to twenty days in jail, and fined the artist who drew a cartoon of similar critical import $100 and sentenced him to jail for ten days.

On appeal, the Missouri Supreme Court dismissed the citations on the ground that the criticism was not comment upon matter then pending before the court. The trial court's view that it could suppress comment on a completed action is, of course, offensive to the cardinal democratic necessity of freedom of expression. The freedom of the press, and the very integrity of the nation's institutions would be gone if the courts could wrap themselves in a mantle of security against adverse comment when a case is no longer pending.

The Missouri Supreme Court echoed federal supreme court decisions that the press has not only the right but also the duty to comment on court decisions when occasion warrants.

The Graduates and the Technical Fields

THE COMMENCEMENT SEASON has stressed the fact that American colleges, technical schools and universities are unable to meet as much as a third of the demands being made on them for trained workers.

This, of course, is the result of the enormous defense program and its acceleration. Not only are technicians of all kinds in great demand, but trained workers are needed in every sphere of activity. A sharp contrast is presented with the situation faced by those who received college and even high school diplomas during the depression years.

This great vocational change suggests against the necessity for serious study and foresight not only with respect to present vocational guidance but also with respect to the situation that will occur when the great defense work is over. Intensive training of new workers in technical work may cause a surplus in such a class.

That is to say, an important economic problem is coupled with vocational development, although some assurance is to be found in the fact that one with technical training stands a better chance in the general field by reason of that advantage. The situation through which we are now passing again stresses the great value of training in skilled craftsmanship and technical specialization whatever the economic circumstances.

The Longest Day and The Weather Man

SATURDAY will be the longest day of the year. Most schoolboys know that light lingers longer on that day because the sun is at its farthest point north. Did you ever wonder why, because of this nearness of the sun, the longest day is not the hottest and why hotter weather comes later?

The United States government weather man is very accommodating and explains that it is due to the difference in travel of light and heat, the slant of the rays and delayed heat-absorbing qualities of the atmosphere around the earth. There's more to it but, just in case you didn't know, there's the answer in simple language. The weather man also exhibited his good manners by saying that the question wasn't such a dumb one.

And speaking of the weather: Statistics show that despite the many jokes about predictions, the weather man is right six out of seven times. Most men would like to know the answers that well about their own businesses.

As there were 267 defense strikes from the first of this year up to June 1 and some forty current stoppages in defense making, Walter D. Fuller, publisher and manufacturers' chief, says that asking the president and the army to come in and settle every strike would be a good deal like putting the supreme court to work collecting past-due grocery bills. A striking analogy, and not without truth.

The average citizen can sympathize with the government's facing a shortage of nickel—having been in that identical spot and in a telephone booth at the same time.

By now many an amateur gardener has come to the conclusion that those lovely pictures in the seed catalogs are masterpieces of imagination.

Broken Friendship

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I am thinking of a friendship that was—and now is no more.

I am thinking of two foolish men. . . . It was their friendship, not mine, and they destroyed it.

They'd been friends for years. Everybody understood that these two were closer to each other than to anyone else. Their lesser friends recognized that fact without bitterness. It was a fact like any other phenomenon of life. Like the law of gravitation or the rate of acceleration of a falling object. It was difficult to think of one of those men without thinking of the other.

Then they quarreled. I should be able to remember the cause of that quarrel, shouldn't I? But the fact that I have forgotten it simply shows how foolish the quarrel was. Some small thing. Some flare-up in a moment of strain. Some thoughtless remark. Some bitter retort. Hot words. Then coldness. Then angry pride. Stubbornness. And that friendship was broken forever. They did not toss it over lightly. They were sadly aware of what they had lost, surrendered, would never enjoy again.

One of them spoke to me once about that broken friendship. He seemed to think I would understand how delicate the friendship of men can be. How difficult it is to regain the beauty that is bruised by harsh words. How impossible it was for him to make the first overture. He said: "I can never feel about him as I did." . . . And didn't I agree?

I said I didn't. Since he asked my opinion, there it was. I told him the pair of them acted like characters out of a romantic novel. Told him friendship was NOT so delicate a fabric. It should be as tough as rawhide, as hard as a diamond. He and his friend had theorized too much about their friendship. It was better to have less theory and more horse-sense. More enjoyment of their friendship and less dramatizing of their relationship.

I told him life was too short to spend any part of it blubbering about a friendship that was supposed to be eternally shattered when half a dozen blunt words spoken by the pair of them could put an end to that nonsense in a minute.

But he said I didn't "understand." Because that "perfect" friendship is still in ruins. . . . And I'm beginning to think that neither of them ever deserved it.

Warmongers Are Entirely Too Busy, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The principal astonishment, after an extensive journey through the Middle West, Southwest and Pacific

Coast country, is to come back to the East and, by soaking in the recent writing of editors and commentators, missed on the trip, learn of the extreme pressure on our Atlantic seaboard for immediate engagement in Hugh S. Johnson shooting war.

Of course you don't have to cross the continent to get a smell of that. There is hardly a regular radio commentator on either commercial or sustaining programs whose editorial asides and coloring of the news have not been in that direction. There is almost none whose output has been in the other direction.

One learns in a very short sojourn in New York that even our president and State department faced with the dangerous puzzle of a two-ocean war with a one-ocean navy, are being prodded and criticized for not rushing out to bring on flaming action at once.

They Can't Know

What do most of these pundits know about the actual, military, naval, economic and even international political values involved and their bearing on the fundamental warfare and security of this country? They can't possibly know a fraction of what the government knows. There is no cause for jubilation. It is something to be deplored.

The deeper we get into this mess the less the people will know about the truth of situations on which dreadful decisions are made. The average commentator—whether for war-like intervention or against it—will know little more. Nobody can applaud that gloomy prospect.

But, remembering that they know so little about these fatful values and apparently care so little about the convictions and sentiment thing, after even I get more gun-shy every year. Just the same, after this trip, I will hazard a guess that there is a widespread and growing feeling in this country that we have been diddled, bamboozled, hallyhooded and deceived into an unnecessarily dangerous position on the one hand, and not sufficiently or promptly enough prepared for the real dangers of our future, and deceived about that also.

If that is so, neither as an editor, columnist nor politician, would I like to answer in a day of public reckoning for that.

To Avoid Shooting War

Certainly the politicians and most of these commentators, assured our people that the Lease-Lend bill was a measure to avoid shooting war. The president himself went far to create that impression. Most Americans might cross their fingers at the assurances of lesser politicians, or even of the columnist priesthood, but they couldn't and didn't believe that the president was pitching them a curve. In that confidence the lease-lend bill was passed.

The ink was hardly dry on its signature before the warriors were crying for an immediate cavalry charge in headline action—whether or not the people might, by that, be shocked to learn that they had been deceived. It begins to look as though the administration, under heavier responsibility, with better information and, perhaps, a better feel of public opinion has a greater respect, first for its own representation and second for the heaviest of all its responsibilities, the ultimate defense of the security and welfare of the American people.

Fraud Not Liked

There is an old cynical political saying that the people like to be deceived. It may be true that they admire the work of clever, political tight-rope walkers and artists of the flying trapeze. But nobody likes to be lied to and defrauded against his own interest by insincere promises and assertions. That is the real interpretation of the landslide that swept Mr. Roosevelt into office in 1932.

While I have sometimes been satisfyingly right in judging that

'ROBOT' TRAPS SPIES

Known as "Keno, King of the Robots," Al D. Blake, 50, is credited with bringing about capture of Commander Itaru Tatibana, 39, of the Japanese Navy, and Torichiro Kono, 57, on espionage charges in Los Angeles. Blake, a former U. S. Navy yeoman, says he was hired to obtain secret naval information for the Japanese on two trips to Hawaii and gave them "secrets" supplied by the Navy after he revealed the plot to G-men.

FOR THOSE WHO DON'T UNDERSTAND ENGLISH

Arming of Merchantmen Forced but Navy Faces Action, Sullivan Says

By MARK SULLIVAN

On May 6, an American ship sailed out of New York. It was called the Robin Moor. Aboard the ship were American passengers, including women and a child. The ship had an American crew, some from seaboard cities, but mainly from little interior towns—Bowie, Texas; Newberry, S. Car.; Wichita, Kan.; Altoona, Pa.; Maywood, Calif., a dozen such towns.

In the hold was cargo from America. This cargo had been selected with special care, to make sure it contained no guns or ammunition, or other materials that might be contraband of war. Before the ship sailed, a carefully itemized list of its cargo had been submitted to the American government, to the New York Custom House, a branch of the United States Treasury. At the custom house, the list of cargo had been gone over with a fine tooth comb, by men expert in the law of contraband, not only American but international, familiar with the latest rulings and decisions. Until the American government was satisfied the ship contained no contraband, it would not permit the ship to sail. This is standard practice of the American government.

The American government had been likewise scrupulous about the destination of the ship. It was going to Cape Town, South Africa, and the American government had approved its going there. Had it been going to any place in a war zone, the American government would have forbidden it, upon penalty of crime.

Everyone scrupulous

The American government had been scrupulous, the captain and owners had been scrupulous. The crew had reason to feel safe. The passengers had reason to feel safe.

The ship sailed for fifteen days. Then, in early dawn of May 21—read the statement of Chief Officer Mundy, here abridged:

"I had just taken over 4 o'clock watch and was drinking coffee on the bridge when I saw blinker lights on the horizon. The lights said, 'AAA', which means 'what ship'?"

"I answered, 'American steamer Robin Moor.' I was very careful to signal the word 'American' first, because I had a suspicion it was a submarine. I sent some one down to wake the captain. The captain ordered the signalman to signal, 'Who are you?' The answer came back immediately, 'Submarine.'"

"A minute later the submarine flashed 'LRL', which meant, 'I am pursuing you.'"

"A minute later the submarine signaled: 'Don't use your wireless.' We stopped our engines and so informed the submarine."

"Then the submarine flashed, 'Send a boat to me.' The captain sent me to the submarine. The commander of the submarine was waiting on the deck. [He was German.] He asked what our cargo was. 'General merchandise for South African ports,' I told him."

"The submarine commander then said what he frequently repeated before we saw the last of him: 'You have supplies for my country's enemy and I must sink you.'"

"I asked him then how much time he would give us. He replied 'only twenty minutes.'"

"I pleaded with him. I pointed out that one of the passengers was a little child. He only shook his head. I tried to impress him that we had women aboard. He still shook his head. I told him about a man and wife who were in their sixties. 'We can't get people like that in boats in a hurry,' I told him."

"Well, maybe I'll give you thirty minutes," he said."

No Care Is Enough

That is the story of the Robin Moor—the conclusion, everybody knows. No amount of care and scruple by the United States government is enough to assure safety. No amount of conformance to law is enough. No amount of care by captain and owners is enough.

No kind of cargo is assured safety. The submarine commander did not see the cargo on the Robin Moor nor any list of it, he knew only what the chief officer told him. If this cargo condemned a ship, any cargo would condemn any ship.

No spot on the ocean is safe. If a spot in the middle of the south Atlantic, midway between Africa and South America, thousands of miles from any war zone—if that spot is not safe, no spot is safe.

What then? Shall we retire from the sea? Call every American vessel home and forbid any ever to sail again? Surely the most powerful nation in the world won't do that.

What else, then? We must make our ships safe where they have a right to be. We must make them safe by force. The force must be the American navy. We can put naval guns on merchant ships and train the merchant crews to use them. That will be something but not enough. To some extent we can have our American ships accompanied by American naval vessels, wherever that is practicable, on routes where our merchant ships travel in numbers. Elsewhere, on all the seven seas, we can do the final thing—have our navy act as a police force, seeking out menaces to our shipping wherever menaces are to be found.

Mr. Roosevelt's continued insistence on development of the St. Lawrence hydro-canal scheme is most discouraging. In his latest utterance on the subject, an appeal to Congress for immediate construction of the project, the president again used national defense as the motive, without submitting anything new in support of the scheme as a defense undertaking.

According to press accounts, Mr. Roosevelt simply said again that the power development and seaway would be valuable to the country's defense, admitted that the project would take perhaps four years, but asserted that nobody could say that the "country's danger" would not extend beyond that time, and added that we "have no right to take chances with the country's production."

It is unfortunate that Mr. Roosevelt clings to this position, we say, because the defense argument in support of this enterprise has been thoroughly exploded. It has been quite positively established that it would be vulnerable to attack, that it would consume a vast sum of money that could be spent to better advantage otherwise, that it would take four or more years to complete, and finally that if more power is needed, this can be provided

By MARK SULLIVAN

On May 6, an American ship sailed out of New York. It was called the Robin Moor. Aboard the ship were American passengers, including women and a child. The ship had an American crew, some from seaboard cities, but mainly from little interior towns—Bowie, Texas; Newberry, S. Car.; Wichita, Kan.; Altoona, Pa.; Maywood, Calif., a dozen such towns.

In the hold was cargo from America. This cargo had been selected with special care, to make sure it contained no guns or ammunition, or other materials that might be contraband of war. Before the ship sailed, a carefully itemized list of its cargo had been submitted to the American government, to the New York Custom House, a branch of the United States Treasury. At the custom house, the list of cargo had been gone over with a fine tooth comb, by men expert in the law of contraband, not only American but international, familiar with the latest rulings and decisions. Until the American government was satisfied the ship contained no contraband, it would not permit the ship to sail. This is standard practice of the American government.

The American government had been likewise scrupulous about the destination of the ship. It was going to Cape Town, South Africa, and the American government had approved its going there. Had it been going to any place in a war zone, the American government would have forbidden it, upon penalty of crime.

Everyone scrupulous

The American government had been scrupulous, the captain and owners had been scrupulous. The crew had reason to feel safe. The passengers had reason to feel safe.

The ship sailed for fifteen days. Then, in early dawn of May 21—read the statement of Chief Officer Mundy, here abridged:

"I had just taken over 4 o'clock watch and was drinking coffee on the bridge when I saw blinker lights on the horizon. The lights said, 'AAA', which means 'what ship'?"

"I answered, 'American steamer Robin Moor.' I was very careful to signal the word 'American' first, because I had a suspicion it was a submarine. I sent some one down to wake the captain. The captain ordered the signalman to signal, 'Who are you?' The answer came back immediately, 'Submarine.'"

"A minute later the submarine flashed 'LRL', which meant, 'I am pursuing you.'"

"A minute later the submarine signaled: 'Don't use your wireless.' We stopped our engines and so informed the submarine."

"Then the submarine flashed, 'Send a boat to me.' The captain sent me to the submarine. The commander of the submarine was waiting on the deck. [He was German.] He asked what our cargo was. 'General merchandise for South African ports,' I told him."

"The submarine commander then said what he frequently repeated before we saw the last of him: 'You have supplies for my country's enemy and I must sink you.'"

"I asked him then how much time he would give us. He

Kettering Genius Worth a Million Of "Brass Hats"

By EDWIN C. HILL

There once was a school teacher tinkering around in the back room of Doc. Robinson's drug store in Milford, O. He was young Charles F. Kettering giving a workout to that native Yankee inventive genius which is apt to break out almost anywhere in our country Mr. Kettering the genial David Harum of American industry is to be credited with Delco lighting and many other inventions and merely incidental thereto is his ownership of $15,000,000 worth of General Motors stock and his directorship of the General Motors research laboratories.

Today it's pretty nearly Gospel when he says we're going to get a protective device which will make back numbers of the murderous submarines; that it has been coming up for the last six years and that it's almost ready. When it comes to the wizardry of electro-mechanics Mr. Kettering is an authority no one would want to dispute and, more important perhaps, he speaks with an abounding faith in the capacity of science, not only to make a better world but a safer world for all hands.

—O—

Few in Europe

We've just been talking with B. friend, a French engineer and physicist, about war's stimulation of scientific research, and the advances in science which have been by-products of war. Our friend is a "free" Frenchman, who finds a base here for continued experiments, supplementary to his previous contributions to radio which have been notable, particularly in communications developments for the French Navy. We happened to mention Mr. Kettering.

"He is one of the greatest inventive geniuses," said my friend. "We don't have many of that type in Europe and you may not have many more of them here. The best scientific brains are now slaved into commercial laboratories, and I do not think such explorations are a substitute for what I believe you have called in this country the 'garret inventor.' But you will find that this war, like all others, will bring a great scientific advance in some fields, and I believe America will be the main beneficiary of this."

—O—

Big Gains in Radio

"In the world war, there was a concentration on ballistics, which produced the German 'Big Bertha.' But there also was great research in communications, and in the last two years of the war radio made more rapid gains than it had made in the preceding ten years. Both England and Germany made great gains, many of which were developed into useful industrial processes."

"In this war, England is at a disadvantage, because its concentration must be in overcoming the long head-start which Germany had in military technology. That will necessarily confine it to trying to do the same thing but doing it better. Stratosphere bombing, bigger and better planes, better bomb-sights—all these are extensions and improvements of old techniques, but they are not in the fertile field of pure research. You have a clean slate here, if you keep out of this war a while longer."

—O—

Motor Killing Beam

"For instance, there's the magnetic beam to kill the motor of a plane or a tank. Some scientists think this is fantastic; others do not, and certainly many of the most valuable inventions have come from what seemed to be the domain of pure fantasy. I happen to know that England was working hard on that before this war started, but now all her energies must be turned to more immediate and pressing problems."

"This war is bringing tremendous new concentration on the old endeavor to gain unlimited energy by breaking up the atom. That means an infinite supply of mobile power. It is by no means impossible. The war of position is ended. That horrendous Big Bertha is just a museum piece now. Your best technicians in America know this."

"If you will just get rid of your 'brass hats', as we failed to do in France and England, you have unlimited opportunity for discovery and utilization of techniques which will keep you safe and free. By all means, give a free hand to your Ketterings. One such man is worth a million military bureaucrats."

It is very difficult to give the president whole-hearted support in the defense program when he insists on tying up with it expensive undertakings like this which have no real defense merit at all.

DOUBLE-PURPOSE AQUATIC PLANT

The umbrella plant, often called umbrella palm, is a splendid plant both for the house and at the shallow edge of the outdoor pool.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, this plant looks like a miniature group of palms. The plant should be set out in a pot and placed so the edge of the pot is just at the edge of the water surface.

In the fall, take the potted plant indoors. Place in a sunny window in a tray or saucer of water. To grow happily the roots want to be wet and planted in rich soil.

DEATH AT THE SWITCH
RICHARD HOUGHTON

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR
MRS. BISBEE clutched the arms of her chair and half rose to her feet as she cried out, demanding to know why her husband had been murdered.

John Jones laid a soothing hand on one of her shoulders. "Mrs. Bisbee, don't excite yourself so! You must be brave. I know it is easier to say than to do, but he would wish it that way."

She reached up and clutched his comforting hand tightly, so tightly that the knuckles of her own hand showed white. "You're right, I'll try. Are you from the police?"

"No," said Henry before Jones had a chance to answer. Henry didn't know what the big man would say, but he knew Mrs. Bisbee, and believed she might not talk as freely to the police as to neighbors she could trust. "We are investigating in a—private sort of way," he explained. "We are interested in getting at the truth."

Jones added, "We think your husband must have known who the murderer of John Ives was—that was why he was put out of the way."

"But I'm sure he knew nothing about the murder. In fact, he told me he thought it was suicide."

"That was before the attack on Mr. Spinelli last night?"

She sat up straighter. Her mind was trying desperately to push her grief to one side. "Yes, it was before," she admitted. "You think he changed his mind after that?"

Henry nodded. "He must have changed his mind. There was no doubt it was murder—after that."

"I didn't have a chance to speak with him. He'd only been home a few minutes and was still in the library—I'd already gone to bed—when the police arrived."

She shuddered. "How could they possibly have thought . . ."

"Now, Mrs. Bisbee!" Jones reminded her. "Your husband was proven innocent—remember that. Don't let his arrest disturb you so. The police made a mistake, that was all."

The neighbor woman brought in the steaming tea. Mrs. Bisbee accepted a cupful and thanked her.

"We are here to help you," explained Jones. "Can you tell us exactly what happened this morning?"

She sipped the tea, shut her eyes for a moment and sat with tight lips. When she opened her eyes some of the horror had left them.

"It must have been about 3 o'clock that I got word," she began. "Someone from the sheriff's office telephoned that Horatio was being let out of the county jail. By that time I was almost hysterical. I'd been telephoning lawyers. I even got the district attorney out of bed.

"The reaction and relief were so great that I lay down on the couch in the library and cried. I suppose I fell asleep there. I didn't know when my husband got home. He thoughtfully spread a robe over me and let me sleep."

"The next I knew it was 5:30. He was back in the library door. He said he couldn't sleep."

"The telephone was ringing. I suppose that was what wakened me. I answered it because it was on a shelf beside the couch."

"It was Marcia Wensley. She said, 'Tell Professor Bisbee I must see him before he leaves for the college.'"

"I asked her where and when, and she said, 'Ask him to stop by at my house at 7 o'clock.'"

"That was all. She hung up. I told Horatio, and he just nodded, mumbled something, and kept on pacing back and forth. I saw he was worrying—studying something over in his mind."

Jones interrupted. "Didn't it seem strange to you that Miss Wensley would telephone so early in the morning? People don't usually telephone their friends at 5:30."

Mrs. Bisbee's eyes widened a bit. "No, to tell the truth I was too upset to think of that. Now that you mention it, it does seem strange, doesn't it?"

"And how do you suppose Miss Wensley knew that your husband was out of jail?"

"She telephoned me earlier in the night and promised to keep her short wave radio receiver tuned in to the police broadcasts and let me know if there was any news. In fact, she called me only a few minutes after the officers did, to let me know Horatio was free."

"Did she have anything else to say at that time?"

"She said she had been sitting up, going through copies of old correspondence she had kept from the time she worked for Ives and King, to see if she could find anything that would indicate if anyone had any reason to kill Mr. Ives."

"Ah!" exclaimed Henry. "That's what . . ."

Jones stepped on his foot. "She said she hadn't found anything," Mrs. Bisbee continued.

Jones reminded the distressed widow, "You spoke of another telephone call—a man's voice, later in the morning. Did you answer that call also?"

"Yes, it came only a moment after Miss Wensley's call at 5:30. The voice was very hard to understand. It rasped on my ears unpleasantly. I knew it was a man, and someone I had never heard before."

Henry suggested, "Maybe the voice was disguised."

"Possibly, although he sounded more like he had a bad cold."

The woman with the teapot spoke up for the first time. She had been listening avidly. "Not many colds going around now. Most people catch 'em in the spring. You'd think in this wet weather everyone would be sniffing and snuffling."

Jones gave her a discouraging look. "And what did the man on the phone want?" he asked Mrs. Bisbee.

"He wouldn't tell me. He insisted on talking to Horatio. He told my husband he had important information about Ives' death, and asked to meet him right away on the old tunnel road back of the Laurence Harkness place. Horatio was quite excited about it. I tried to keep him from going, but he insisted. Somehow I was afraid. I felt something would happen. Oh, Lord! Why didn't I keep him home?"

The neighbor set the teapot hastily down on a table and flung her arms around the nearly hysterical Mrs. Bisbee. It was her turn to give the two men a hard look. "Now see what you've done!"

Jones backed uncomfortably toward the door, drawing Henry with him.

Outside, Henry's pent-up words broke forth. "Miss Wensley must have found something important in her letters—after she spoke to Mrs. Bisbee about them. That's why she phoned at 5:30!"

Jones nodded. "Something that gave her a clue to the killer. Before Bisbee got a chance to help her, he was killed."

"It's shaping into a pattern that begins to make sense."

"We've got to question Miss Wensley again. We've got to learn what was in that letter she found."

"Marcia isn't likely to tell. The clue must point toward another member of the model railroad club. Marcia wanted to confide the information in a friend she could trust—and ask him what to do about it. She might confide in another friend—but not in us."

"I'm going to have a try, anyway."

"Go ahead," said Henry. He suddenly realized how tired he was. His hands on the umbrella were trembling. "I wish you luck, Mr. Jones, but I've had enough of hysterical women for this morning."

Average American's Average Diet
Includes Sufficiency of Vitamins

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The last two days we have reviewed the subject of the vitamins. Those chemical elements which are present in foods in small quantities but are so necessary for complete bodily health and vigor.

Of course human beings and animals have always got vitamins in their foods if they were perfectly healthy, but only within recent years have we known of the existence and the necessity of these food elements. The knowledge has created a great deal of activity on the part of nutritionists and food manufacturers, who have thought that it was a good sales point to state that their foods were reinforced with vitamins.

I do not believe that this is necessary. All of us should and do get the vitamins we need in the form nature intended us to take them. In our ordinary foods, I believe that the average American gets plenty of vitamins in an average diet. We have been told however by Surgeon-General Parran of the Public Health Service that forty per cent of the American public are suffering from vitamin starvation, and when some of us talk about an "average diet," we are asked sarcastically what an average diet is. That question is not so difficult to answer.

An average diet is one that contains a raw fruit, berries or tomatoes, a glass of milk, an egg, butter, green vegetables, and meat at least twice a week. Even the meat may be omitted if an extra egg or other protein food is substituted.

Frequency of Starvation

Now as to this vitamin starvation that is sweeping the country. I have been very skeptical of it because, in a large clinic, I do not see many cases and I have written to some of my friends to try to find out how frequent it is. I have figures from a large hospital in the East which takes care of a class of people that ordinarily would not be able to obtain a varied or expensive diet, and I am told that in the three years, 1938, 1939, and 1940 there were nearly 47,000 patients in that hospital, only 111 of whom were diagnosed as sick with a vitamin deficiency.

In a California hospital where the same class of people are cared for, there have been nearly 7,000 patients in the last three years and only twenty-six cases of vitamin deficiency of any kind diagnosed.

Vitamin B

We hear that there is a high incidence of vitamin B deficiency in expectant mothers. One of my friends has gone over his records for me and has found in the ten years between 1929 and 1939, out of 16,649 mothers there has been no case of vitamin B deficiency observed. In a large Chicago hospital during the last five years, 9,000 women have been cared for in the obstetrical department with two cases of neuritis which might be due to vitamin B deficiency.

On the whole I feel that we can discount the scareheads about the number of vitamin-starved people in the United States. This, of course, does not mean that we can afford to relax in our efforts to provide well-balanced meals for everybody. These statistics simply show that the American people have learned the lesson of vitamins and are getting far better-balanced meals than the theoretical-minded nutritionists would have us believe.

Teeth Held
For Ransom

LOS ANGELES, June 18 (AP)—New crime wrinkle: holdup on the installment plan.

William Bumpass, 44, told police: Two men accosted him at gunpoint last night. His new teeth chattered until they fell out.

Robber: "My, but them's lovely teeth."

Bumpass: "They ought to be. I paid $45 for them."

Robber: "Well now ain't that fine. You got no money so we'll just keep the teeth till you get $45. We'll be at Fifth and Main streets tomorrow with the teeth and if you have $45, you'll get them. If you don't have the $45, we'll take an installment and hold the teeth till you get the rest."

Bumpass kept the date. So did Det.-Lieuts. Rex Olson and G. W. Thaxter. Quickly Bumpass pointed out two men.

The teeth, Olson said, were found in the men's room.

Colfax Rebekah Lodge Celebrates Anniversary

Fifty-fifth Birthday Is Observed by Odd Fellows Organization

The fifty-fifth anniversary of the Colfax Rebekah lodge No. 1, I. O. O. F., was celebrated Tuesday evening at the regular monthly meeting, held at the lodge, South Mechanic street. The institution June 19, 1886, was commemorated with a large birthday cake.

Miss Catherine Kerns read the charter and Mrs. Esther Shannon, deputy, read the Odd Fellow's Ode.

The Memorial service, which followed, was opened by a group singing, "In a Garden." The members then formed a cross, each carrying a green candle in a pink holder, the lodge colors, each gave a reading and extinguished their candles.

A bouquet of white carnations for the deceased members of the lodge was placed before the black draped charter, pink rambler roses formed the decorations on either side. Three lighted tapers stood before the charter for the deceased of the year.

Mrs. Jennie Deffinbaugh became a member in August, 1922; was Noble Grand in 1928 and died July 26, 1940.

Mrs. Mamie Reed became a member March, 1928; was Noble Grand January, 1932; and received the decoration of chivalry, she died May 15, 1940.

T. B. Cessna, Mt. Savage, joined Chosen Friends Lodge, No. 34, December 19, 1890; received the first and second degrees, December 26, 1890; the third degree, January 2, 1891; he served as Noble Grand from January 1, 1894, to June 30, 1894. He was admitted to Cumberland Encampment No. 23, March 9, 1891, was advanced to Grand Ruler.

March 23, 191; exalted to Royal Patriarch, April 13, 1891, he was also Past Grand Patriarch. Mr. Cessna joined Canton Allegany No. 4, January 8, 892. He was Grand Patriarch from March 21, 1932 to March, 1933. He had become a member of Colfax Rebekah lodge in 1906.

At the close of each history a candle was extinguished. The service closed with a group singing "Abide With Me."

About forty-five attended.

Approximately 10 salt domes have been discovered in Louisiana.

ARTIFICIAL FINESSE
THERE ARE combinations of the cards which afford you no chance at all to finesse successfully if you lead them yourself. But, if an opponent leads the suit, you may be able to put in an intermediate card which will knock out a card a couple of levels higher, and therefore build up a finesse situation against some other card on a later round of the suit. These synthetic or artificial finesses can produce just as important tricks as the standard kind.

had four of the suit headed by either J or Q, but not both. So he put in the 8 from dummy. That forced the J to cover, and the A won.

After three trump tricks, South returned to the diamond suit by finessing the 10, which held, and the K then furnished a discard for the spade 3. By means of this play, he limited his losses to two tricks in spades and one in clubs, so made his contract.

How in the world could South ever make the contract without that help? He had to count on the one possibility that West had the diamond 9, plus either the Q or J. If those situations prevailed, he could succeed, by aid of his friendly enemy. Otherwise he would be down. Notice what would have happened if he had unsoundly played the diamond 10 on that first trick!

ADMINISTRATRIX'S SALE OF VALUABLE RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY SITUATED ON THE SOUTHERLY SIDE OF COLUMBIA AVENUE, IN THE CITY OF CUMBERLAND, ALLEGANY COUNTY, MARYLAND.

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage from Bernard Williams and Mary A. Williams, his wife, to W. Boyd Smith, dated November 23, 1921, and recorded in Liber 81, folio 255, among the Mortgage Records of Allegany County, Maryland, covering the property hereinafter described, default having been made under the conditions and covenants in said mortgage, the undersigned will offer for sale at public auction to the highest bidder, alongside The Second National Bank of Baltimore, in the City of Cumberland, Allegany County, Maryland, on Monday, June 24, 1941, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., all that lot, piece and parcel of ground situated in the City of Cumberland, Allegany County, Maryland, and known as Lot No. 2 of Section "A" of the Cumberland Improvement Company's Northern and Southern Lots, Cumberland and particularly described as follows:

BEING a certain point on the Southernly side of Columbia Avenue, it being the end of the first line of Lot No. 2, Section "A," in said Addition and running North and said side of said Avenue, North 66 1/2 degrees West 50 feet, then at right angles to said Avenue, South 21 1/2 degrees West 140 feet to an alley, then with said alley, and parallel with said Avenue, South 66 1/2 degrees East 50 feet to the end of the second line of said Lot No. 2, Section "A," then with said second line reversed, North 21 1/2 degrees East 140 feet to the place of beginning.

IT BEING the same property conveyed by and described in a deed from William Diamond and wife to Perley A. Smith and Rita A. Smith, his wife, dated November 23, 1921, and recorded in Liber 135, folio 161, among the Land Records of Allegany County, Maryland.

Excepting from the operation of this deed all that part of said lot conveyed to Perley A. Smith, et al., to John Romp, et al., by deed dated December 12, 1919, recorded in Liber 135, folio 48, of said Land Records and excepting the same portion of said lot conveyed by and described in a certain conveyance between the same parties covering the same portion of said lot, with some sewer rights added, said deed bearing date of February 28, 1921, and recorded in Liber 135, folio 611, one of the Land Records of Allegany County, Maryland.

The property to be sold as aforesaid is the same which was conveyed to Bernard Williams and Mary A. Williams, his wife, by Perley A. Smith and Rita A. Smith, his wife, by deed dated November 23, 1921, and recorded in Liber 135, folio 161, among the Land Records of Allegany County, Maryland.

The property being sold fronts 25.2 feet on Columbia Avenue and extends back with an equal width 140 feet to an alley. It is improved by one side of a double frame dwelling house known as No. 808 Columbia Avenue, containing 8 rooms and bath, gas, electric and furnace and a composition roof. It is in a good state of repair.

TERMS: Cash. The purchaser with such terms as may be agreeable to the parties making the sale. The 1941 State, County and City taxes to be adjusted to the date of sale and all prior taxes and liens to be paid.

Minister's Pensions Interest 716

FREDERICK, Md., June 18. (AP)—The Rev. Dr. H. N. Bassler of Harrisburg, Pa., reports that 716 ministers and charges so far have affiliated themselves with the new pension plan of the Evangelical and Reformed church.

Dr. Bassler spoke for the board of pensions and relief of the United Church at today's morning session of the Potomac synod.

The new plan, he said, is designed to give ministers and their families an annual pension of slightly more than the average salary of a minister upon retirement after reaching the age of 65 or even earlier in case of sickness or disability.

More than 100 clerical and lay delegates from Maryland, Virginia, The District of Columbia, and Martinsburg, W. Va., heard Dr. S. L. Flickinger, Winchester, Va., call for "a return to God as a refuge in this time of stress."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks grim.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "up and up." Get a package today. Take as directed. Amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills, 10c and 25c.

Some Facts About Food Prices!

Below is an interesting comparison of food prices; listing the same items for the same week in 1937 as this year, 1941. Much is being said regarding higher food prices.

This would lead some to the conclusion that food prices are unduly high. We assure you this is not the case. In fact, food prices have been unduly low for the past several years when you compare them with more normal years. For over half a century, our policy has been to supply foods of high quality at low prices consistent with such quality. Now, as always, It Pays to Shop Where Quality Counts and Your Money Goes Furthest.

The Items Tabulated Directly Below Are 24% Lower Than in June, 1937

O'Connor Asked to Let Troops Cross Toll Bridges Free

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 18 (AP)—Governor O'Connor has been asked to direct the State Roads Commission to open Maryland's toll bridges to free use by troops engaged in army maneuvers.

Delegate Leon A. Rubenstein (D-fourth, Baltimore), who made the request, wrote O'Connor that the one-hundred-and-fifteenth Infantry combat team, en route to Virginia recently, had to detour through Washington because it lacked funds to pay tolls for crossing the Potomac river bridge at Morgantown.

"I believe that it is within your sovereign power as the chief executive of the state to issue an order to the state roads commission authorizing and directing them to permit the movement of troops and equipment without charge," Rubenstein said.

State Roads Commission Cannot Enlarge Staff

BALTIMORE, June 18 (AP)—The technical staff of the State Roads Commission today was virtually no larger than it was on May 6 when Governor O'Connor authorized the addition of seventy-one new positions, Chief Commission Engineer Wilson T. Ballard said.

Both Ballard and Commission Chairman Ezra B. Whitman said every effort had been made by the roads commission to expand the technical force, but that trained men were not available at the salaries which the commission was able to offer.

Ballard characterized the problem as a "tough one," created by the tremendous demand for technicians of all kinds resulting from the defense program.

The chief engineer said that "not more than a dozen" of the seventy-one positions authorized had been filled, and that a few old employees had resigned.

PITTSBURGH CHURCH WILL HOLD CAMPS NEAR SOMERFIELD

The Summer Camps of the First Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh will open Tuesday, July 1 for the 1941 season.

This camp comprises 140 acres of beautiful mountain and river valley land near Somerfield, Pa., in Somerset county, on the headwaters of the Youghiogheny river. The camp is one of the best equipped in this part of the country, and has ample facilities for tennis, soccer, foot ball, mush ball, archery and field sports. A large swimming pool built in the river affords safe and clean bathing.

The camp for boys opens July 1 and continues for a month. The camp for girls opens July 29 and continues for one month. The Summer Conference for young people is held at the camp over Labor day weekend, from Friday August 29 to Monday, September 1.

The Summer Camps and Conferences are open not only to the young people of the First Church of Pittsburgh, but to other well recommended persons. The boys' camp is in charge of one of the assistant ministers, and the girls' camp is under the direction of the secretary of the girls' club of the First Church. A registered nurse is in attendance at both camps.

Those who desire information or application blanks are asked to write to the First Church of Pittsburgh.

Cooperation

of persons and property. It is to you, the trained men of action, that the community, the state and the nation look.

Co-ordination between municipal, state and federal enforcement agencies is the order of the day. The safety of the home front is in your hands.

You have the training, the experience and the resources necessary for the task before you. With intelligent and capable enforcement on your part, the best drawn statute ever enacted is worthless.

Concluding, Orrick expressed confidence that the co-ordinated efforts of the officers "in the all-important field of law enforcement will play a prominent part in demonstrating to the grief of the enemies of free government abroad in the world today, that we are in fact, as well as in name, the United States of America, united in a common cause for the defense of our common heritage."

Our Stresses Co-operation
Police Commissioner Orr, in his address of welcome, also stressed the importance of co-operation between law enforcement agencies, particularly in this tri-state area. He pointed out the presence of "one of the great transportation lines of the nation between the East and West—between the Pittsburgh steel district and the Atlantic seaboard," with the products obtained from these areas carried on it "toward their destination to help the democracies in war-torn Europe."

Noting also that this section is part of a vast coal region, vital for the continued operation of factories that make needed war material, Orr said that "it is essential that the law enforcement officers of this section be on the alert at all times in order to prevent any acts of sabotage or any other measures which would tend to obstruct the rapid transportation of the materials so sorely needed in the democracies of the Old World."

The police commissioner warned that "we in this section are not immune from an element which would not hesitate to throw every obstruction within its power to thwart or stop any manner of production of aid toward Britain, in the various ways conceived and put into effect by the Communist organization."

The motion picture film, entitled "War and Order," depicted special police activities in war-torn London. Made under the supervision of the British Ministry of Information, it was brought to this county by two FBI agents who studied British police procedure under war conditions.

Board Presents Demonstration
W. B. Board, of Washington, special FBI agent, presented the demonstration on bombs and explosives, and O'Connor discussed procedure recommended for the coordination of police efforts in the defense program.

Others present besides those participating were Olat Hage, special FBI agent, of Hagerstown; Police Chief Oscar A. Eversman, Assistant Police Chief John J. Treiber, Lieutenant James E. Van, City Detective Robert E. Flynn, City Detective B. Gaffney, City Detective James J. Gordon, Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe, Deputy Sheriff David M. Steele, Deputy United States Marshal Howard P. Loughrie, Constable Edgar M. Lewis, Captain H. D. Schmidt, of the B&O police; Lieutenant Robert E. Shourt Sr. of the B&O police; Special Agent Walter W. Clay of the Cumberland and Pennsylvania railroad; Special Agent H. B. Clark of the Western Maryland railway; Special Agent Thomas E. Smith of the Western Maryland railway and Postmaster James C. Shriver, all of Cumberland.

Hugh Allen Meade, of Baltimore, assistant attorney general, Sheriff J. William Owens, of Garrett county; State Police Corporal Thomas Currie, of Oakland; Mayor L. M. Fraley, of Oakland; Police Commissioner C. O. Diehl, Police Chief William H. Peters, Captain of Detectives Norman W. Wolfe, Deputy Sheriff Robert G. Miller and Police Sergeant Jesse B. Brown, all of Hagerstown; Police Chief Charles C. Clayton, of Luke; Constable John R. Lloyd, of Brunswick; and S. O. Auglin, of Martinsburg; W. Va. special agent for the B&O.

Girl Is Injured When Bicycle Hits Barbed Wire Fence

Maxine Radcliffe, 14, of Cresaptown, was admitted last night to Allegheny hospital with a badly lacerated right wrist and ear, suffered when the bicycle she was riding struck a barbed-wire fence.

Attendants reported her condition as "fairly good."

Three Men Enlist In Army Here

Three men enlisted in the United States Army yesterday at the local recruiting station. They are Everett L. Coleman, a graduate of this year's Thomas, W. Va., high school, who was assigned to the Air Corps, Barkdale Field, Louisiana.

John E. Blank, of Zihlman, assigned to the Thirty-ninth Air Base Group, Spokane, Wash., and Adrian L. Bowley, of Elk Garden, W. Va., assigned to the Air Corps, Maxwell Field, Ala.

sale of cotton tail rabbits, dead, at any time except that a person who kills a rabbit in one of the counties can sell it for food but not for sale.

Wardens May Search Cars

Under another new law to which he referred, salaried, uniformed deputy game wardens are authorized to search automobiles for determining bag limits and licenses. He said this measure created considerable interest.

Another law passed by the legislature provides full discretionary power to the Upland Game and Inland Fish Commission independent of the statute. Mr. LeCompte said that this law met with considerable opposition and its validity will likely be contested.

Fishing Season Announced

He reported on the fish season as follows:
Trout, April 15 to July 15; bass, June 15 to November 30; crappie, blue gill, sunfish and other species, July 1 to November 30.

An unusual law, according to Mr. LeCompte, was enacted providing a closed season on groundhog or woodchuck in Garrett and Allegheny counties from October 1 to June 30, and an open season from July 1 to September 30. Formerly, there was no closed season on groundhogs or woodchuck in this state.

He referred to the new law providing for the separating of the State Forestry Department from the University of Maryland, and setting up a Board of Natural Resources for the purpose of creating a cooperative spirit among the several departments which are authorized to protect the natural resources of Maryland.

The governor is authorized to appoint a board of six members to serve without salary and who will be required to meet at least every two months.

Open Season for Deer

Of particular interest to hunters in this section, he reported that an open season on deer for six days from the first Monday in December.

Commissioner Fulcher P. Smith of Cumberland made an address on the progress of the Upland Game and Inland Fish Commission during the past year.

Others who spoke were Harry Edwards, president of the Garrett county council; J. W. Hasel of the Allegheny county council; R. S. C. Weagley, president of the Washington county council and John Cotton, of the Soil Conservation Service, who was introduced by R. P. McHenry, Allegheny county agent, and delivered an illustrated address on wildlife.

Cooperation Is Urged

Following the address of Mr. LeCompte, on the evening program, an address was delivered by R. C. Wilson, president of the Allegheny County Farm Bureau, on "Cooperation between Farmer and Sportsman."

H. C. Buckingham, district forester, served as secretary of the conference, and P. Q. Clapper as corresponding secretary. Others attending were Francis Ruge, Frostburg; Harry J. Barton, Rawlings; H. E. Burkhardt, Mt. Savage; H. M. Armstrong, Rawlings; Lee Windle, Luke; Hugh Stevenson, Ellerslie; Harry Morgan, Frostburg; C. J. White, Ellerslie.

The council last night passed a resolution urging Gov. O'Connor to appoint a man from a Western Maryland county as secretary of the new State Board of Natural Resources. The council in its resolution to the governor did not recommend any individual as the post is filled after a competitive examination but the name of J. Wesley Kelly of Cumberland was prominently mentioned by those attending the meeting as a logical choice.

THE DAILY STORY

QUESTION MAN

A Man Who Thought He Knew the Answer to Everything and the Story of How One Simple Question
Tripped Him Up

By JOSEPH BARTON

"It's a beautiful day here on the boulevard, folks, and we have a beautiful crowd here before our portable microphone all ready and willing to toss questions at yours truly, the Old Question Man!" Harry Winton spoke smoothly into the mike he held in his hand.

glimting of the sun off the various bits of exposed jewelry they wore. The men looked well-dressed.

"For the benefit of our unseen audience of the air, we might explain here that the Question Man will endeavor to answer any and all questions put to him by this fine crowd!"

Winton looked out over the knot of interested, smiling faces. He made a quick selection of his first mental antagonist—a pretty young man tagged along directly behind her. The fine, large diamond that sparkled on her left hand as she adjusted a wind-blown ringlet seemed to indicate his status.

"Oh, what is the deepest gold mine in the world, Mr. Question Man?" she asked. Again Winton studied her in seeming perplexity as his encyclopaedic mind revolved about the question. Half of his mind was on the question and the other half on the girl.

A fine-looking young girl, he considered briefly, well worth the outlay the abashed young fellow had evidently made for the heavy stone in the engagement ring! The stone looked almost too large to be real—but the clothing of the pair and their general appearance indicated that they were used to nice things.

"You almost caught me there, Miss," he chuckled with good humor. "The Morro-Velho mine, which is located in Brazil, is the world's deepest, being over 6,400 feet in depth. Sorry. Who else would like to try a question—something hard?"

"I would! I'm Sgt. James McNary, from the detective bureau."

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Help 15 Miles of Kidney Tubes Flush Out Poisonous Waste

If you have an excess of acids in your blood, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may be overworked. These tiny filters and tubes are working day and night to help Nature rid your system of excess acids and poisonous waste. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up at night, swelling, indigestion under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Kidneys may need help the same as bowels. So ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

"Who wants to try me now?"

blonde with a trim figure and a self-conscious escort. He beckoned to her.

"Will you come up here, please. The little lady with the tulle, burgundy suit and the strand of pearls to match!"

With an understanding glance at her escort, the young woman edged her way toward the Question Man. She smiled.

"May we have your name please, and your address?"

"Lisbeth Connors, 430 Beach Drive. Now should I ask my question?" The Question Man grinned at the crowd and squared his shoulders as though expecting an ordeal. The little by-play always amused them. He centered his eyes on the girl's necklace, impersonally, and nodded.

"You're no stranger, Miss Connors," he kidded along, "not to the people who read their society pages faithfully! I'm half-scared at what one of the season's foremost debutantes might spring on me—but go ahead. If I can't answer, you will be awarded a copy of the Question Man's Own Book. Go ahead, please!"

"Can you tell me what is the most costly book in the Congressional Library?" Lisbeth Connors asked brightly. Winton wrinkled his brows for the benefit of the crowd and looked appealingly at his assistant, Oakley Douglas, then at the grinning crowd.

"What a way to start today's little session, Miss Connors. I hate to admit it—but the Gutenberg Bible, for which Dr. Otto Vollbehr paid $350,000, is the costliest book in the Library. But thanks for trying! Who wants to try me now?"

Again Winton assayed the knot of people who had stopped long enough in their afternoon promenade along the boulevard to listen to the broadcast. His eyes brightened.

"Who said there was a depression here?" he said lightly. "Spring seems to have brought all the jewels, human and actual, out into the sunshine! Will that fine-looking young woman in the new tan frock come up here please? You look as though you had a poser on the tip of your tongue, Miss. Would you mind telling us your name and address?"

With the routine blush, the girl made her way up toward the microphone and waited for her cue to go ahead. A slightly embarrassed

Wife Got FAT—

No Longer Attractive

LOST HUSBAND'S LOVE

The above headlines appeared in a New York newspaper in connection with a divorce trial that had attracted wide attention. "She was a beautiful woman," one witness testified, "but she got fat and is not attractive any more."

Thousands of women are getting fat and losing their appeal just because they do not know what to do. If you are fat, how would you like to lose some of it and at the same time gain in physical charm and attractiveness—more energy—greater activity?

Why not do what thousands of women have done to get rid of pounds of unwanted fat? Take 1-2 teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts (a famous English formula) in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast and keep it up for thirty days. Cut out pastries and fatty meats and go light on white bread, potatoes, butter and cream. Then weigh yourself and see how many pounds you have lost.

"A bottle of Kruschen Salts will last you for 4 weeks and costs but little. Ask Cumberland Drug Co. or any druggist for a bottle of Kruschen, plain or new effervescent—sparkling—pleasant—and start today to lose fat. Satisfaction guaranteed or money back.—Advertisement"

Question Man!" The slight, wiry little man had escaped Winton's eyes as he stood in the crowd, but now he pushed his way up toward the microphone. "You could take a big worry off my mind if you could answer something for me!"

"We'll do our best, sergeant!" Winton smiled, with a wink for the crowd. He stilled the momentary feeling of panic the detective's sudden speech had caused him.

"All right, tell me who the clever criminal is who's been spotting jewelry on rich women when they're out on the street during the day—and then having them followed—and robbed? I'd get a creditable mention if I could know the answer to that one!"

The crowd laughed at the thought of an earnest officer bringing his troubles to the Question Man. It tickled them. But Winton only shrugged and smiled thinly.

"If you'll wait until after we go off the air, sergeant, maybe we can help you. Next, please. Who else has a question?" The detective moved on to stand close to Oakley while the broadcast went its accustomed course. He was still there eyeing cynically the radio men as the crowd dispersed afterwards.

"How about it, Mr. Question Man? Maybe we can turn the tables here—the judge will give YOU a book, even if you can't answer my little question! Pretty smart racket you had, Winton!" He jerked his head to indicate the squad car at the curb.

"Too bad you're a cop, McNary," the Question Man philosophized as he followed Oakley into the automobile. "You could qualify for the job I've just resigned from!" (Distributed by United Feature Syndicate)

RECENT BRIDE

Mrs. Daniel Arnold, Jr.

FROSTBURG—Miss Geraldine Workman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Workman, East Loo street, this city, and Daniel Arnold, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Arnold, Sr., Westernport, were married Wednesday evening, 7:30 o'clock, at Mt. Zion Baptist Memorial church, Beall street, by the Rev. W. D. Reese, pastor. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Crowe.

Following the marriage ceremony, witnessed by a large company of friends and relatives, a reception was held at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. John R. Workman, Maple street.

The bride, a graduate of Beall high school with the class of 1938, is well known here and has been active in the affairs of the Welsh Memorial church.

The bridegroom is employed at the Cumberland and Pennsylvania railroad shops, Mt. Savage. He is a grandson of the late August Arnold, for many years a Frostburg city commissioner.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold will reside in Westernport.

Six Indictments
Returned by Jury
In Hardy CountyJudge H. M. Calhoun
Sentences Pair to Penitentiary

MOOREFIELD, June 18.—The grand jury impeached for the June term of the Hardy county circuit court returned indictments for five felonies and one misdemeanor at the Hardy county court house, Moorefield, Tuesday.

Waldo T. Wilkins and Otis H. Wilkins were charged with stealing two hammers and other goods. The pair pleaded guilty before Judge H. M. Calhoun and were sentenced to a term of one to ten years in the penitentiary.

An indictment for a felony was returned against Charles H. Knotts, charged with escaping from the prison camp at McCauley.

An indictment was returned against David Nazelrod, charged with maliciously assaulting W. G. Mongold.

An indictment was returned against James C. Cleaver charged with passing a bad check. An indictment for a felony was returned against Thurmond Funkhouser charged with criminally attacking and assaulting a girl of sixteen.

One misdemeanor was returned against Lester W. Haugh, charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of an intoxicant.

In recess of the county court, Woodrow Wilson Tusing was appointed guardian of Broza Jefferson Tusing, giving bond of $100 with Broza Jefferson Tusing as surety.

Guy F. Ludwig, Mathias, duly appointed a minister of the gospel, was licensed to celebrate the rites of matrimony. Bond was posted of $1500 with O. W. Hahn as surety.

All truckers in Hardy county whose hearing was held before the Public Service commission at the state capital Friday were granted permits to operate as common carriers by the commission.

The truckers granted permits in Friday's hearings were Olin Roomsburg, Moorefield, to transport in Hardy, Grant and Pendleton counties; Ray Mathias, Baker, to operate generally in Hardy county; Dewey Clayton, Moorefield, to operate generally in Hardy county; Raymond L. Bean, Mathias, to transport goods within a fifteen mile radius of Mathias; Marlin W. Bean, Moorefield, to transport commodities generally in Hardy, Grant, Pendleton, Mineral, Hampshire and Randolph counties and M. A. Bean, Moorefield, to operate a wrecker truck in Hardy, Hampshire and Grant counties.

Attorney Ralph J. Bean represented the truckers at the hearings. No protests were filed. N. H. Tenny, Moorefield, and Elmo Orndorff, Wardsville, are the two other truckers having permits from the Public Service commission to operate in this section. Their hearings were held recently.

Beckley Co-Ed Still Holds First Place
In Festival Contest

BERKELEY SPRINGS, W. Va., June 18.—With returns from five more orchestras polled in the contest to select West Virginia's "loveliest college girl" and queen of the Tomato and Health festival, Gwendolyn Beall of Glenville State Teachers college climbed within 13 votes of Natalie Bailey of Beckley in first place.

Winner will be selected by a vote of leading orchestras. Latest returns were from Vaughn Monroe, Barney Rapp, Charlie Spivak, Laurence Welk and Dick Stable.

Surprise in the latest tabulation is Louise Cruise of Concord State Teachers college who vaulted into fourth place and only a vote away from Betty Barbee of Fairmont State Teachers college who is in third place.

Paul Yost, director-general, said today that plans for this year's Tomato and Health festival were rapidly taking form. The celebration schedule calls for the coronation and pageant on August 30, a special "health" observance on August 31 and the feature parade on Labor day.

A score of other events will fill each hour of the three-day celebration.

Briefs

Marriott Bauer, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bauer, was treated at the office of a local physician last evening for a deep cut on her forehead, received when she was accidentally struck by a swing while playing with a group of children. Late Frosts and Dry
Weather

GRANTSVILLE, June 18.—Strawberries in this section will not be as plentiful this year as they were last year, unless the crop turns out much better than the growers anticipate. While a few berries were picked Friday, it was said, most of the growers made their first picking today. Indications were that this year's crop of berries would be only about fifty per cent of that harvested last year, and some were of the opinion it might not even run that much. Late frosts, coupled with the dry weather which prevailed for a time, damaged many of the plants they said. However, recent rains are benefiting the crop materially and the berries are said to be of good quality and flavor, although perhaps not quite so large as usual.

Strawberries grown in this community have always seemed to find a ready market and local residents are anxiously awaiting their first taste of the home grown product.

Wedding Is Held

Announcement is made of the marriage of Woodrow Wilson Custer, youngest son of Mrs. Simon Orendorf, Grantsville, and the late John Custer, and Lorraine Frantz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Frantz, Friendsville, which took place at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, June 14. The ceremony was performed at Friendsville Baptist church, before an assembly of approximately fifty relatives and friends. The Rev. W. Morehead, of Confidence, Pa., read the ring service before an altar decorated with baskets of foxglove and pink and white peonies. His wife, who presided at the organ, played the nuptial music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a frock of powder blue crepe and carried a prayer book. Miss Loretta Rush, her only attendant, was dressed in dark blue. B. Frantz, brother of the bride, was best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was given at the bride's home in honor of the wedding party and members of the immediate families. Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Bender, Mrs. Simon Orendorf, Miss Anna Wenger and Thomas Bender, relatives of the bridegroom, were the hosts.

The couple left soon afterward for Baltimore, where they will make their home for the present.

Mrs. Custer was a graduate of Friendsville high school last week. Mr. Custer attended the Grantsville schools and for the past year has been located in Baltimore where he is connected with the Martin Airplane factory. Having been born here, he is well known in the Grantsville schools and for the past year has been located in Baltimore where he is connected with the Martin Airplane factory. Having been born here, he is well known in the Grantsville section, and both he and his wife are equally popular in their community.

Social Is Held

The Apron Social sponsored by the local Christian Endeavor Society last evening, for the benefit of the Reformed church building fund, proved a success. Miniature aprons, on which was sewed a large pocket, had previously been distributed with instructions to measure the waistline and place a penny in the pocket for each inch measured. Approximately $30 was netted for the cause and an increase if the amount was expected as some of the aprons have not yet been turned in.

An interesting program was arranged for the evening's entertainment. Readings were given by Glenn Stanton, Hayward Broadwater, Billy Layman and Marie Durst. A short religious dramatic sketch, "The Boy's Friend," was presented by Hayward Broadwater, Robert Giotfelty, Billy Beachy, Dalton Stanton, Joseph Giotfelty, Charles and Thomas Bender, and Robert Speicher.

"Henpeck Holler Gossip" was the humorous play offered. Comprising the cast were Betty Beachy, Lottie Patton, Joyce Beachy, Ruth Klotz, Audra Speicher, Louise and Margie Gortner, Ray Houck, Ruth Yommer and Dolly Layman. The evening was concluded with a social hour and refreshments.

Principal of Central High School Honored by Alumni Group

LONACONING, June 18.—More than 150 alumni of the Central high school attended the honor banquet and dance at the Clary Club last night, at 6:30 o'clock, at which William Somerville, Cumberland, class of 1897, was toastmaster.

Arthur F. Smith, principal, the honor guest, who has just completed his forty-first year as head of the local school, spoke concerning Central school as it has grown in the forty one years of his principalship. He also recalled numerous incidents of school life and ended his talk by saying, "God Bless America, God Bless our fine State of Maryland and God Bless Central high school."

Milton Dick, representative in the Maryland General Assembly, was the principal speaker. Dick in his talk praised the honor guest for his work at the school and stated that he was glad a new high school would be built in Lonaconing. Dick also spoke concerning several of the bills which were introduced in the Maryland General assembly this year under the guise of national defense. Dick, a former resident of Lonaconing, is a graduate of the Central school.

Leslie Clark introduced the toastmaster and during the after dinner talks, welcomed the class of 1941 into the association. Edward Nolan, president of this year's graduating class, responded for the class.

Following a dinner of turkey, parsley potatoes, green peas, corn pudding, ice cream and cake, a dance was held, with music by Jay Van and his orchestra. Some seventy-five couples were present for the dance.

Those on the committee for the dance and banquet were: Miss Helen White, chairman; Miss Daisy Cline, Margaret Hepburn, Mrs. Thomas B. Dick, and Mrs. Christine Collett.

New Publication
On Forestry
Makes AppearanceCopies Are Available at Several Central West
Virginia Towns

A new publication, "New Forest Frontiers" has been received here. Arthur A. Wood announces. Copies are available at Elkins Forest Service office and at the offices of the five Forest Rangers in Parsons, Petersburg, Durbin, Marlinton and Richwood.

"All gone forests yield all gone people," says Earle H. Clapp, acting chief of the United States Department of Agriculture's Forest Service, in presenting the new photo publication on American forestry in which he pictures the prospect for improving both publicly and privately owned forest lands.

As three fourths of all forest land is privately owned, the publication points out, any program for a permanent forest economy, must deal specifically with such land and its protection from fire and reckless or unwise cutting. Due consideration must be given to the broad public interests in recreation, watershed and flood control areas, and the production of miscellaneous forest products which often mean the difference between subsistence and decent living for thousands of families.

According to Supervisor Wood, the situation described by the Chief of the Forest Service, exists to a marked degree in central West Virginia and it is believed that "New Forest Frontiers" will be of interest to many of our people in this section.

Potomac Edison
Wants To Buy
Garrett LinesTown Says Firm Can Furnish Power at Reduced Rates

BALTIMORE, June 18 (AP)—R. E. Town, secretary-treasurer of the Potomac Edison Electric Company, said today he believed his firm could operate the Garrett county distribution lines of the Associated Maryland Electric Power Corporation more economically than under the present ownership.

Associated Maryland, he declared, has been operating at a loss.

The Potomac Edison's application to purchase the lines and franchises of Associated Maryland in Garrett county was taken under advisement by the Public Service commission at the conclusion of today's hearing in the matter.

Town told the commission that approximately 600 consumers would be affected by the purchase and that the transfer would be effected within a few days if the commission approved the application.

He said the reproduction cost of the lines which his company sought to acquire as $131,704 and said he believed the purchase price of $85,000 "very reasonable."

Potomac Edison would put into effect reduced rates for fifty-two per cent of the domestic consumers on the lines of PSC approval of the transfer was forthcoming, Town declared.

Raymond Gawryla, supervisor of property records for the Associated Maryland Corporation, testified that about forty miles of distribution line would be included in the proposed purchase.

Potomac Edison was represented at the hearing by Francis J. Carey Gaylord. Clarke represented Associated Maryland.

WILL BE NINETY
YEARS OLD SUNDAY

Hiram S. Coleman

FROSTBURG—Mr. Coleman, 110 Bowery street, will be the guest of honor Sunday at a reception to be held at the home of his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gurney Coleman, Bowery street, in observance of his ninetieth birthday.

Mr. Coleman was born in Garrett county, near Lonaconing, June 22, 1851, and remained a resident of that section until twenty years ago when he moved to Frostburg. He was seriously injured by a gas explosion at his home in 1924 and confined to the Mipers' hospital for several months.

A lifelong Republican, Mr. Coleman served as postmaster of Sutton, Garrett county, for thirteen years from 1904 to 1917. He also conducted a general store at Sutton. The earlier years of his life were spent in farming.

Mr. Coleman, a devout member of the Church of the Brethren, is the father of seven children, Freeman, Olin and Cecil Coleman, Oakland, Calif.; Calvin, Akron, Ohio; Lewis, Middlebury; Gurney, Frostburg, and Mrs. David Llewellyn, Gilmore. There are twenty-one grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. His wife died thirteen years ago.

The reception in his honor, Sunday, will be held from 2 to 7 p. m.

Pifer Is Reported
Ousted from Post
In Liquor StoreJames Casey, Keyser, Said
To Be Appointed Temporary Manager

KEYSER, W. Va., June 18.—W. C. Pifer, manager of Keyser's state liquor store, No. 22, since its opening, has been notified that he is to be relieved of the management. It was reliably reported here today.

James Casey, clerk at the store, has been appointed temporary manager pending the naming of a permanent manager.

Pifer, a prominent Democrat and several times mayor of Keyser, is the second liquor store head in Mineral county to be dismissed recently. Thomas Goeke, manager of Piedmont's store No. 38, having been relieved of the post several weeks ago.

Pifer is at present on a fifteen-day vacation, and according to the report, his management terminates with the end of the vacation.

In the meantime, another report had it that efforts are being made to have the State Liquor Control Commission reconsider Pifer's dismissal before the vacation period ends. Friends here are considering presenting his case to the commission, asking that he be retained.

Receives Library Post

Mrs. Old D. Shreve, Keyser, has gone to Huntington to take over the duties of State Superintendent of Libraries, in charge of the library project of the Work Projects Administration, to which post she has been appointed. She was formerly a field supervisor in this section for the library project.

Mrs. Shreve, the former Miss Emily Gray Hoffman, was librarian at Potomac State school here before her marriage.

Her husband, a member of the Potomac State school faculty, is attending the summer session of Duke university, Durham, N. C.

Trout Released

4,000 trout, all below legal limit, were released in New creek Monday. Game Warden Joseph E. Hughes said today. The trout were all below legal size, most of them being fingerlings, Hughes said.

William Dom Dies; Former Resident Of Meyersdale

Pastor of Coraopolis Presbyterian Church Conducts Rites

MEYERSDALE, Pa., June 18.—The remains of William T. Dom, for many years a resident of Meyersdale, were brought here yesterday afternoon for interment in Union cemetery.

Mr. Dom was a son of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Dom, both deceased, and was born in Wellersburg, this county. Until his removal to Coraopolis twenty-four years ago he was employed in the Savage Fire Brick works at nearby Keystone Junction. At Coraopolis he was employed as an electrician for the Dravo Construction Company.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Sue Engle Dom, a native of Elk Township, and a former teacher in the local schools and a son, John L. Dom, 1308 Ridge avenue, Coraopolis. He also leaves a brother, Harry Dom, a Baltimore & Ohio baggage master, and Miss Margaret Dom, Pittsburgh.

Services were conducted at the Armour funeral home by the pastor of the Coraopolis Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Dom was a member, yesterday morning.

Meeting Is Held

Members of the Past Grand association from the local lodge of Odd Fellows and the other ten lodges of Somerset county numbering approximately 150, met last evening in the I. O. O. F. hall at Somerset to discuss business matters relating to Odd Fellowship principally that of Somerset county, and to enjoy themselves generally.

President C. R. Miller, Rockwood, had charge of the meeting which opened with a musical concert by the Somerset high school orchestra, and interesting movies on winter sports, canal trails and battling with the huskies.

These meetings are held monthly throughout the county. The topic for discussion this month was "The Recreation Center at Deer Valley," a large tract of land recently purchased by the lodges of southwestern Pennsylvania, located adjacent to Mount Davis, ten miles south of Meyersdale, the highest point of elevation in the state.

It is the intention of the members of this district to make it one of Somerset county's best assets, and a recreation center second to none within the confines of Pennsylvania. While some work on the plot has already been accomplished it is expected that more will be done during the coming months.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Beal, son Leo Beal, and M. J. Kerrigan, of Pittsburgh, were among the number from out of town who attended the funeral services of the former's sister, Mrs. Nannie (Beal) Lynch, held yesterday morning in SS Philip and James' Catholic church, here.

Mrs. Charles Platt, 222 North street, who underwent a serious surgical operation in Hazel McGilvery hospital, Main street, Monday morning, is recovering satisfactorily.

Franklin Foreman, Terra Alta, W. Va., was admitted as a medical patient to Wenzel hospital, Salisbury.

Dempster Blames Seidel For His Resignation as State NYA Administrator

Tells Reporter Assistant State Superintendent of Schools Would Not Give Him Co-operation

The "deliberate and malicious failure of certain state school officials to co-operate in the defense training program was blamed yesterday by Ryland N. Dempster for his resignation as state administrator of the National Youth Administration.

In his first public statement since his resignation was announced last week, Dempster, who is vacationing in the Savage River state forest near New Germany, told a Cumberland News reporter in an exclusive interview here that the condition which led to his resignation was largely attributed to John J. Seidel, assistant state administrator of schools.

Seidel Blamed

Dempster asserted that Seidel, whom he described as ambitious for the job as state school superintendent, had refused to co-operate in setting up classes for a defense training program related to NYA shop work and had apparently influenced county superintendents to follow suit.

The former NYA administrator said that school superintendents in many parts of the state suddenly became "cool" toward the program for no apparent reason shortly after promising full co-operation. This, he indicated, was traceable to the work of Seidel.

Immediately upon passage of a bill by Congress last fall calling for public schools to provide classes to tie in with NYA project work, Dempster went on the NYA offered to aid the school system in any way possible. The offer was repeated in January, but the state department of education "apparently didn't want to co-operate; they wanted to devote their time to their own special program," he added.

Program 'Bogged Down'

"Then they found they couldn't get anywhere on their own, and their program bogged down," Dempster stated. "In the face of public criticism and pressure from Washington, they finally began trying to organize NYA classes, as the law called for, but their program is still unsatisfactory, still bogged down."

Since Seidel, who directs state vocational education activities, is anxious to succeed Dr. Albert S. Cook when he retires as state school superintendent, Dempster went on, he immediately sought to cover up his failure to get an adequate defense training program underway by raising a "smokescreen" in the nature of an attack on the NYA and seeking to make him the "scapegoat."

Backed up by other school officials upon whom the former NYA administrator indicated "pressure" had been brought, Seidel finally managed to jockey into a position where he had to resign for the good of the NYA, according to Dempster. Referring to letters from several county school superintendents to Maryland's senators and representatives attacking him, Dempster indicated that "those, too, were prompted" by Seidel.

Unwilling To Co-operate

Efforts of the Washington office of the NYA to smooth over the hostility between the state department of education and the state NYA failed, and when it became apparent that school officials were unwilling to work with him, Dempster said he submitted his resignation.

Dempster, who had been state administrator since February 15, 1936, said he submitted his resignation early in May, to be effective June and to be announced by Aubrey Williams, national administrator.

Coin Club Plans Dinner Next Week

More than Fifty Expected To Attend Ladies' Night Affair Tuesday

Plans for a ladies' night banquet next week were discussed by members of the Western Maryland Coin club at their monthly meeting last night at Minke's Cottage, Christie road.

The affair, expected to attract an attendance of more than fifty will be held at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday at the All Ghan Shrine Country Club, according to William L. Wilson, Sr., president of the club.

The committee in charge of arrangements consists of Hugh Funkhouser, H. Holmes Cessna and Howard W. Vandegrift.

Plans for another hobby show next year was also discussed in view of the success of the club's first venture in this field in April. One of the features of the meeting was exhibition of a scrapbook of press clippings on the recent hobby show.

A display of coins and paper money was shown by Benjamin Charles, Daniel Staley and Charles L. Hyde, and Charles Morris spoke on coin collecting as a hobby.

Dr. James E. McLean was elected to active membership and Frank Lee Carl, city editor of the Evening Times, was named an honorary

Firemen To Honor Deceased Members With Ceremony

Memorial Service To Be Held This Afternoon at Eagles' Home

Members of the State Firemen's Association and Auxiliaries will hold a solemn memorial service this afternoon at the Eagles home, North Mechanic street, to honor deceased members.

The program will open with a musical prelude by Edna Engle followed by singing the hymn, "Faith of Our Father" by the assemblage. Invocation by the Rev. Hiri A. Kester, pastor of Kingsley Methodist church, will precede a musical selection by the Park Place Methodist church choir entitled "The Giveth Peace". The Rev. William A. Eisenberger, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will read the Scripture.

A memorial address will be delivered by Alvin B. Storey after which a list of members who died during the last year will be read while the assembly stands in silent respect.

The Rev. James W. Minter, of Baltimore, chaplain of the firemen's organization, will deliver a prayer with the audience responding. The Park Place Methodist church choir will lead the group in singing "America". The Rev. Father Bonifacio, pastor of St. Peter and St. Paul Catholic church will close the ceremonies with benediction.

SIX PERSONS ARE TREATED FOR INJURIES AT MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

The dispensary at Memorial hospital had one of its busiest days yesterday with six persons being treated for a variety of injuries.

Mrs. Margaret Griffey, 24, of Ellettsville, fell on the railroad tracks near her home while out walking and suffered a fractured right leg. After a splint had been applied and the injury treated she was admitted.

Two boys suffered injuries when a bicycle they were riding got out of control and left the road ending up in a ditch. Merritt McMillan, 15, of 2 Glenwood street, who was operating the bike, suffered a fractured left collar bone and Robert Thompson, 16, of 941 Maryland avenue, riding with him suffered lacerations of the forehead, nose and left hand.

Kaye Kennedy, 15, of 319 Grand avenue, suffered a fractured left wrist when he fell while playing softball at Locust Grove. Margaret Harrison, 18, of Ridgeley, W. Va., was treated for a lacerated right thumb suffered while opening a tin can.

Richard Anderson, of York, Pa., who was visiting his aunt, Mrs. James C. Duff, of Klosterman's addition, fell down a pair of steps and suffered a bad laceration above the right eye. After several stitches were used to close the wound he was released.

He has had extensive experience in foreman training for private industry and formerly held positions as supervisor of part-time education and principal of the occupational school in Baltimore and director of vocational education and director of school business affairs in Muncie, Ind.

Plans Are Made For New Concert Series in City

Organization plans for a new concert series for Cumberland were completed Tuesday when more than twenty-five music lovers of the area met at the Fort Cumberland hotel to form the Cumberland Concert Association.

Under the plan adopted Tuesday, four concerts by some of the world's leading musical artists will be presented. The series for the coming season includes: The well known opera "The Barber of Seville" sung by the same leads which presented the opera at the Metropolitan last season. The chorus will also be picked from the Metropolitan group. Carlos Ramirez will be heard in the title role.

Pianist To Appear

The second attraction will be a piano recital by Rosalyn Turck, one of the leading pianists now on tour. Jean Tennyson, soprano, and Alexander Sved, baritone, will present a joint recital. Both are leading operatic and concert singers. At present Sved is accompanying Arturo Toscanini on a South American tour, filling engagements for Lawrence Tibbett.

As the final attraction of the season, a symphony orchestra will be presented. "The particular one will be announced before the ticket sale opens September 17. Mrs. Robert L. Critchfield, chairman for the campaign, announced last night that the drive will be held from September 17 to September 27.

The Cumberland Concert Association was formed from a nucleus of the former Cumberland Cooperative Concert Association. The new plan, however, is felt by the leaders, to be more adequate for the community and for music lovers. All concerts are announced before any tickets are sold so that prospective concert-goers will know what they are buying. An additional concert is also available, and the attractions are felt to be far superior to any presented here in recent years.

Committee Is Named

These concerts are under the management of Charles L. Wagner, noted impresario who discovered and presented such stars as John McCormick, Alice Nielsen, Rudolph Ganz, Mary Garden, Amelita Galli-Curci, Moriz Rosenthal and Grace Moore.

Cooperation Civil Defense Keynote, Orrick Declares

Assistant State Attorney General Addresses W. Md. Officers

Co-ordination of local, state and national authorities in the field of law enforcement "will play a prominent part in demonstrating that we are in fact, as well as in name, the United States of America," Norwood B. Orrick, assistant attorney general of Maryland, declared here yesterday in an address at the first in a series of quarterly police conferences under the "FBI Law Enforcement Officers Mobilization Plan for National Defense."

Some thirty law enforcement officials from Western Maryland attended the meeting, held yesterday afternoon at the federal building. Welcomed by Orr, Besides Orrick's talk, the officers also heard an address of welcome by Police Commissioner James Orr, saw a moving picture and a demonstration on bombs and explosives and participated in an open forum led by Harry T. O'Connor, special agent in charge of the Baltimore office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who supervised the meeting.

Discussing the need for co-ordination of enforcement activities, Orrick pointed out that "although both national and local government have their own separate functions to perform, neither can meet the problems of defense without the other."

Cooperation Is Keynote

It is recognized, he went on, that registration of aliens and counterespionage must primarily be federal functions, but, as the attorney general of the United States has pointed out, "the great body of law protecting personal rights and property rights must come from the state and must be enforced by the state."

There is no purpose or desire of the federal government to usurp or interfere with this function," Cooperation, therefore, is the first keynote of civil defense, he said.

Liberty Is Threatened

To prevent any manifestation of this, he said, the civil problems of defense must be handled by "trained and experienced persons under laws adopted and enforced without violation to the fundamental laws of the land."

"Rash and unrestrained action by well-meaning but muddle-headed citizens immediately places in jeopardy the very fundamentals of civil liberty that we are preparing to defend," the assistant attorney general asserted.

"That this liberty is threatened by certain unsavory elements within in cannot be denied. And it is one of the paradoxes of a free government that the very guarantees of liberty embodied in our state and federal constitutions are most loudly invoked by degenerate groups who use them as shields for their campaigns to destroy the very government which permits them to exist."

Care Is Needed

Handling of this problem, with maintenance of the "delicate balance between freedom and restraint," can only be done by trained law enforcement officials acting within the law, Orrick emphasized.

Care is a third characteristic of the preparation for the civil side of national defense, the speaker continued, noting that it is best illustrated in the careful study and drawing of "model acts" designed to "fill certain gaps in the existing law and at the same time having due regard for the rights of private persons and private property."

Four such model acts were passed by the Maryland legislature and signed by Governor O'Connor, Orrick pointed out, listing them as follows: 1. Authorizing the creation of the Maryland State Guard to augment the regular law enforcement officers in the event of a crisis; made necessary by the induction of the National Guard into federal service.

Regular Explosives

3. Regulation of traffic in explosives, "designed to place as small a burden as possible on those engaged in the lawful manufacture or use of explosives, while at the same time preventing the promiscuous use thereof by persons who could have no legitimate use for such articles."

4. Providing for the Inter-state protection of public properties, such as Cumberland's water supply in nearby Pennsylvania and its airport across the Potomac in West Virginia.

The three elements of the civil defense program, co-operation, cool-headedness and care, are embraced in a fourth word beginning with "C"—co-ordination, the primary factor, said Orrick.

"The laws are on the books," the speaker told the officers. "It is for you to give them vitality, to carry them out for the protection"

Escaped Convict Is Arrested by State Police

Hit and Run Accident Also Causes Arrest of Alleged Auto Thief

An eighteen year old Long Island, N. Y., youth is being held in the Allegany county jail awaiting arraignment of New York authorities who will charge him with the theft of an automobile and an outboard motor and a 30 year old escaped convict from Maryland penitentiary is back behind the walls of the state prison as the result of a hit and run accident which occurred here Monday night at 11:45 o'clock.

The youth is Julius A. Brunn, of 2565 Thirty-sixth street, Astoria, Long Island, N. Y., and the escaped convict is Andrew John Polseny, 30, of Baltimore.

Hopkins Makes Arrest

Sgt. Charles Magaha, of the State Police detachment here reported last night that Trooper William E. Hopkins arrested Brunn and Polseny early Tuesday morning, a short time after the car bearing New York license, which Brunn was driving struck a car driven by John A. Fradiska, 639 Shriver avenue, on Henderson boulevard at Pear street as Fradiska was taking his wife to a local hospital to give birth to a child.

Soon after the accident the state police were notified of the crash and were told that a New York car was involved. Trooper Hopkins stopped the car on the National Highway in front of the State Police barracks in LaVale and arrested the driver and his passenger. Hopkins said he found an outboard motor in the car when he made the arrests.

Tuesday Sgt. Magaha questioned the two men and Brunn finally admitted that the 1940 Pontiac he was driving was a stolen car, that he stole it Sunday night in White Lake, N. Y., and that he also stole the outboard motor in White Lake.

"The state police sergeant said that extensive questioning of Polseny, who first gave his name as James Dixon of New York City, revealed that he was Polseny and that he escaped from guards on May 26 while being transferred from the penal farm back to the Maryland penitentiary."

Serving 15 Year Term

Sgt. Magaha said that an investigation showed that Polseny was serving a fifteen year term in the penitentiary for holdup and robbery and that he had served eight of the fifteen years. Polseny was returned to the state prison yesterday by guards from the institution who came here for him.

Sgt. Magaha said that state police from Harris, N. Y., would arrive here today and take Brunn back to New York where he will be charged with the theft of the automobile and outboard motor and that no charges will be placed against him here.

The state police said that Brunn picked Polseny up in Central Park, New York City and that they were on their way to the West Coast and planned to go to California.

None of the occupants of either car was injured—on yes Mrs. Fradiska gave birth to a son in Allegany hospital Tuesday.

Training in child care and in aiding old people and shut-ins are included in the Girl Scout "Training for Today's Needs," courses being offered at Girl Scout Camps throughout the country this summer. Miss Florence Ann Schlott, local director, reports.

These courses, which are offered to all women whether associated with Girl Scouting or not, are under the supervision of experienced and trained Girl Scout staff members. These instructors, through careful selection and continuous progressive training, are prepared to pass on the benefits of many years of experience.

Any woman over twenty-one may register for "Training for Today's Needs."

Leadership of girls will be the keynote of the special training programs. They will teach women how, in turn, to direct girls in care for children, old people and shut-ins. They will have training in selecting and preparing food, good health habits and the importance of thrift, first aid, and fire prevention in times of stress.

"Training for Today's Needs" is not only preparation for any emergency but it is training built upon the practical necessities of American life.

Women who are eager to serve their country in national defense are thus given the opportunity to train effectively through the work of Girl Scouting.

Organization Plan For Home Defense Is Announced

Volunteers Are Being Recruited in Twenty-one Cities and Towns

BALTIMORE, June 18 (AP)—Headquarters of the Maryland state guard announced today an organization plan under which home defense units will be formed in twenty-one cities and towns outside of Baltimore.

The plans call for one battalion in Western Maryland, two in Central Maryland, one in Southern Maryland and two on the Eastern Shore, with companies in various cities and towns. Baltimore will have four battalions, including a medical unit.

Battalions and companies outside of Baltimore will be organized as follows:

Central Maryland — Frederick, Kensington, Silver Spring, Pikesville, Towson, Bel Air and Westminster.

Southern Maryland — Annapolis, Hyattsville and Laurel.

Western Maryland — Cumberland and Hagerstown.

Upper Eastern Shore — Easton, Chestertown, Centerville, Elkton and Denton.

Lower Eastern Shore — Pocomoke City, Crisfield, Salisbury and Cambridge.

Men from Howard and Garrett counties, where there will be no companies, may enlist in nearby units.

Brig. Gen. Dwight H. Mohr, state commander, said most battalions had begun recruiting volunteers and that the organization was expected to reach its full strength of about 2,000 men within the next month.

Each battalion headquarters will have a commander not above the rank of major, an executive officer not above a captain, a plans and training officer not above a major, a supply officer not above a captain, a medical officer not above a major and an adjutant not above a captain.

Companies will consist of a captain, a first lieutenant, a second lieutenant and not more than fifty enlisted men.

Cunningham Awarded Cresaplow License

The application of Charles S. Cunningham for an on sale liquor license in Cresaptown was approved in circuit court yesterday. One of six applicants, Cunningham indicates that he will open business at an address on the McMullen highway.

Cunningham's license is one of several additional ones given out this year in excess of former years, the increase being due to the rise in population count of Allegany county revealed by the last Federal census.

State Game Warden LeCompte Gives Resume of New Laws Passed

State Game Warden E. Lee LeCompte, Baltimore, was the principal speaker at a dinner given last evening at the Gunter hotel, Frostburg, by the Allegany County Advisory councils of Washington and Garrett counties.

The dinner was held in connection with an afternoon and evening program of the three groups. LeCompte, introduced by Mayor Arthur P. Hoffa, of Barton, chairman, gave a resume of new game and fish laws and discussed the 1941-42 outlook for the department.

Confining himself to laws of particular interest to Western Maryland counties, LeCompte said that the only change in the hunter's license law was the elimination of a clause providing that a non-resident of the state, assessed with $500,

United Service Program Explained to Lions Club by Chairman

A complete explanation of the program of the United Service Organization, which is raising funds for recreational facilities for soldiers and national defense workers, was given yesterday by Thomas F. Conlon, local chairman of the group, before the Cumberland Lions club.

Conlon told of how the funds will be used to provide healthy recreational activities at camps and near defense plants in order to keep up morale and prevent vice conditions from arising because of lack of entertainment for homesick and restless men.

The club then voiced its approval of the plan and indicated its willingness to aid in the worthy cause.

Two Local Men Enlist in Marines

John J. Bender, of 401 Cumberland street, and Roger William Lynch, of 8 Ridgeway terrace, enlisted in the Marine Corps and were accepted yesterday at the main recruiting station in Pittsburgh, Pa. Both men signed up at the local station and Sgt. Richard Maurer, local recruiter, said they would take their preliminary training at Parris Island, S. C.

Among the candidates for president of the association is Felix Foote, of Lonaconing Good Will Fire Company, and a member of the executive committee of the state association and president of the Allegany-Garrett County Firemen's Association.

Other candidates mentioned for the presidency are: S. T. Culver, of Hebron; Roland Duke, of Leonardstown; William Echton, of Antietam; Hagerstown, and F. Lester Smith, of Frederick.

The post of treasurer will be contested by William G. Kerbin, Jr., of Snow Hill, whose father is a past-president of the association, and Elmer Knight, of Frostburg.

Robert Benson, of Cockeysville, will probably be unopposed to succeed himself in the office of secretary.

The lone vacancy among association trustees will be sought by Eugene J. C. Raney, incumbent, of Kensington, and Allen Baker, of Hyattsville, a former vice-president and chief of the Hyattsville department.
